By the Associated Press.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, urged upon all nations last night the adoption of "a comprehensive program embracing both economic reconstruction and revitalizing of principles which are indispensable for restoration of order under law."

He laid a seven-point program before a Europe made jittery by Hitler's mobilization of 1,000,000 men for army maneuvers on the Czech and French borders and Mussolini's speech last Thursday indicating a European war was approaching.

He spoke over a national radio network, deliberately choosing a moment regarded as crucial in Europe to throw America's moral weight into the arena before it was too late.

He addressed himself to a world which he said was becoming "smaller and smaller" with the result that "it will soon no longer be possible for some nations to choose and follow the way of force and for other nations at the same time to choose and follow the way of reason. All will have to go in one direction and by one way."

Speech Heard Abroad.

His speech was sent by short-wave radio to Europe and Latin America and was radioed textually by the State Department to American diplomatic representatives abroad so that they, at their discretion, might present it to foreign governments.

His program follows:

"We believe in, we support and we recommend to all nations economic reconstruction as the foundation of national and international well-being and stability.

"We believe in, we support and we recommend adherence to the basic principles of international law as the guiding and governing rules of conduct among nations.

"We believe in, we support, and we recommend respect for and observance of treaties, including, in connection therewith, modifica-

Light Delivery Operators Join Post-Junior Board Campaign to Cut Highway Perils; District Grocery Stores 'Glad to Co-operate.'

By Howard F. Wentworth.

More than 400 drivers of light delivery trucks were enlisted yesterday in The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce traffic safety program when the District Grocery Stores, Inc., pledged support of a continuing crusade against highway hazards.

Joining with numerous other local trucking concerns which have agreed to participate in a long-range move to prevent accidents and save lives, Abraham Kaufman, vice president of D. G. S., said safety instructions would be issued to drivers in the company's 277 stores.

"We are glad to co-operate," said Kaufman, "and will offer 100 per cent support. Washington authorities can count on our drivers to help reduce accidents."

Mindful of the youngsters killed in the city's heavy truck traffic and recognizing the splendid safety efforts of larger trucking concerns, The Post and Junior Board have

Nazis Assail 'War Mongers;' Million March

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 16.—Nazi officials and the government press struck out angrily at foreign "war mongers" tonight as the German army swelled rapidly to wartime strength in summer maneuvers and guns blazed at imaginary enemies along the Rhine.

The tempo of Europe's greatest peacetime movements since the World War increased steadily as long lines of gray-clad troops marched up to the French and Belgian frontiers, some along "invisible roads" constituting part of new fortifications along the western borders.

Discipline Imposed.

Normal civilian life was obscured by rigid discipline imposed in Fuehrer Hitler's "dress rehearsal" for a totalitarian war that musters men, women and children into its ranks.

Details of what is taking place in the scattered concentrations of 1,000,000 or more men under arms were lacking because neither the war ministry nor the press discussed details of the sweeping operations.

Newspapers lashed out in chorus against what they termed mendacious reports abroad, leading millions to fear that war might be at hand; that Hitler might be ready to strike a blow at Czechoslovakia.

Der Angriff, under the heading "War Cries!" said foreign governments must know that Germany has only peaceful intentions.

Maneuvers Defended.

"It need not be mentioned," the newspaper of Propaganda Minister Goebbels said, "that the rumors which the English as well as the French press has been spreading, concern us.

Japan Hurls Threat to Rule All Shanghai

Settlement Council Hotly Attacked for Checking Pursuit of Terrorists.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Aug. 17.—Japanese today threatened to seize police powers in the British and American defense sectors of the International Settlement to enforce their demand that they be allowed to stamp out Chinese terrorists who have been attacking Japanese and Chinese who are co-operating with them.

Japanese anger was directed chiefly at Great Britain since the British dominate the municipal council which is the Settlement's government. They carefully refrained from attacking the United States although United States Marines were as active as the British in rounding up special service agents of the Japanese army who were penetrating the foreign areas in an effort to get at Chinese Nationalists.

Marines Turn Back Truck.

British and American authorities believed the Japanese army was adopting a "deliberately challenging attitude" designed to convince more than 1,000,000 Chinese civilians in the International Settlement that they must accept Japanese rule.

Japanese language newspapers yesterday attacked Settlement authorities for the detention and search, during the week-end, of a Japanese army colonel and a major, in civilian clothes, on suspicion of illegal political activities. The newspapers described the detentions as "insults to the Japanese army."

The newspapers described in hurt surprise the injury of a Japanese agent by U. S. Marines in their defense sector, remarking that the Marines "were treating Japanese like enemies."

The Marines' reply to this was to turn back, with a show of machine guns and bayonets, a Japanese mo-

Alien Inquiry to Weigh Charge Labor Dept. Shielded Bridges

By the United Press.

The House committee investigating un-American activities voted last night to inquire immediately into charges that Labor Department officials had aided Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader, while efforts were being made to deport him as an alleged Communist.

The action was taken behind locked doors at insistence of Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, who demanded that the group air charges in a report by Edward Sullivan, committee investigator, that Labor Department officials gave "aid and advice" to Bridges on his future conduct.

Sullivan's report said witnesses can be produced to "name the day and date" when Bridges was allegedly contacted by an immigration service official who called "him into his office where he read to him a confidential letter of instructions on his future behavior."

"We agreed to go thoroughly into the Bridges matter and to call on the Labor Department to submit all of their files on Bridges," Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, announced after the session.

Bridges, Australian-born leader of the International Longshoremen's Union, was previously named as an alleged Communist in testimony before the Dies committee by John P. Frey, high-ranking American Federation of Labor official, a

Heat Fells 18 In Capital; No Relief Is Seen

Victims Range From 3 Months to 56 Years; U. S. Lets Help Off.

Eighteen persons were hospitalized for heat prostration in Washington yesterday, a record for 1938. They ranged from a 3-month-old baby to a 56-year-old man. Dozens of others felled by the high temperatures were given first aid by ambulance crews.

There probably would have been more heat prostrations, but compassionate Government chiefs in most offices sent the employes home. Even the employes at the Weather Bureau were let off.

Yesterday's peak temperature was 95 at 4 p. m., as against 96.3 at the same hour Monday. However, the humidity was up to 46, which was 4 per cent higher than the day before.

Day's High Is 95.

During the night, the temperature went down only to 77, with the result that homes and buildings were still warm as yesterday dawned.

There was no immediate prospect of substantial relief. The forecast was for partly cloudy today with possible local thundershowers tonight or tomorrow, with temperatures "not quite so warm" today.

The heat here is part of a "wave" that extends all along the Eastern seaboard.

Bathing pools were jammed and as night approached thousands were preparing to sleep in Rock Creek and Potomac Parks.

Few were willing to believe that yesterday was not hotter than the day before. Fewer still would believe that the temperature was under the 100 mark.

Ambulances were screaming over softened asphalt throughout yesterday, as heat prostration cases were reported.

Capital Savants Study 'Houses of Dead' in Missouri

Among the most provocative excavations carried on by the Smithsonian Institution this summer is that of the "houses of the dead" near Kansas City, it was announced yesterday. The "houses" are mounds about three feet high, beneath which are stone chambers containing both skeletons and cremated remains of ancient American Indians.

According to Dr. Walso R. Wedel, conducting the excavation, the race was distinguished by a ridged skull which must have given them obliquely-arched foreheads.

Dr. Wedel believes the structures may be associated with those of "mound builders" of the Ohio Valley. Last summer he found near Kansas City some utensils resembling those used by the mound builders, representing the farthest West extension of these people ever discovered.

Torso Fiend Kills 2 More; Toll Now 14

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—The thirteenth and fourteenth known victims of a sex-mad, surgically skilled murderer who has mocked the law four years were picked up in a trash dump here today.

Like six of the others that have been found naked, nameless and dismembered in Cleveland junk yards, garbage heaps and watercourses, the bodies found today were those of women. With cold precision, as always, the murderer had—with one body—severed the head from the trunk, the upper torso from the lower and neatly sliced away both legs.

The victim had been a woman 20 to 25 years old, with brown hair.

The remains were found under a pile of concrete blocks, apparently having been carefully hidden in the dump, which is only a block or so from the scene of the Great Lakes Exposition last year. The head was tied up in wrapping paper. The upper torso was girded in old canvas and the legs were in a paper carton.

The lower torso and all the organs were missing.

Second Body Found.

The first body was found this afternoon. A few hours later, the skeleton of the second woman was discovered 50 feet from the spot where the first was found.

Police said the first victim found today was slain less than three weeks ago. The second probably was killed much earlier.

Cleveland police have hunted the mad surgeon since September 5, 1934, when the mutilated body of a woman was washed up from the lake just beyond the city limits. Coroner's physicians detected the work of a skilled hand. There was no evidence on which to base an arrest.

Coroner S. R. Gerber is inclined to discount connection of the 1934 slaying with the series.

Not until a year later did the killer's trail show again. The next September 23 two boys stumbled across the trunks of two men at the foot of Jackass Hill, near Kingsbury Run, a small stream. Nearby, buried under a few inches of sand, were the heads. One of these victims was identified as Edward A. Andrasy, 28. The other, a man of 40, was never identified.

Work of One Man.

The torso of a woman was next. Expertly cut into pieces, the body was found January 26, 1936, in two bushel baskets in an East Side vacant lot. The corpse was identified as that of Mrs. Florence Pollia, 41.

The similarity of the dismemberment in all the cases convinced police that all were the work of a callous murderer who had obtained —as surgeon, nurse, undertaker or

Lindberghs Land In Poland on Way To Red Air Show

Warsaw, Aug. 16 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed in their black and orange monoplane at the Warsaw Airport tonight on a surprise flight from England to Moscow by way of Hanover, Germany.

It was understood Lindbergh planned to fly tomorrow to a meeting at Moscow Thursday at which Russian North Pole fliers would discuss possibilities of a flight from somewhere near the North Pole to the South Pole area. He also was said to have planned a conference on medical problems with Dr. Smirnoff, Moscow heart specialist. Lindbergh is co-inventor with Dr. Alexis Carrel of an artificial heart.

Moscow, Aug. 16 (AP).—The newspaper Evening Moscow tonight said Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh would arrive here tomorrow to witness a huge air parade as part of aviation day celebrations throughout the Soviet Union.

Roosevelt Asks Defeat Of Tydings, O'Connor; Purge Irks Georgians

Gallup Poll Finds 75% of State's Voters Dislike Attack on George.

President Retains Support of 7 in 10

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Aug. 16.—Although studies of public opinion in Georgia find President Roosevelt overwhelmingly popular throughout the State, a majority of Georgia voters disapprove of the President's tactics in criticizing Senator Walter F. George at Barnesville last week, according to a special cross-section survey just completed by the Institute of Public Opinion.

GALLUP.

Last Friday, one day after the President read the Georgia Senator out of the party as a reactionary, the institute telegraphed its 17 field correspondents in Georgia, requesting them to test public sentiment on the President's speech, and to wire their returns. These correspondents conducted an investigation among representative voters in all sections of the State, reaching the proper proportion of farmers, persons in the various age groups from 21 to 55 and over, and in all economic levels from reliefers to the very wealthy. Each voter was asked:

"Do you think President Roosevelt should have made the Barnesville speech criticizing Senator George?

The vote was an overwhelming "No!" The actual percentages were:

Yes	25%
No	75

The Barnesville speech represents the first time the President has denounced a sitting Senator in such strong terms. With Senator George accepting the Presidential challenge, the George campaign will be a crucial test of New Deal prestige.

While the survey seem to indicate a degree of public resentment over the President's speech, the results do not contribute any forecast of the outcome of the Georgia primary itself, in which Senator George is opposed for renomination by former Gov. Eugene Talmadge and Lawrence Camp, the candidate indorsed by Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Popular.

Judging by many institute surveys in Georgia, there can be little question of Roosevelt's popularity in the State. While these surveys find that he has lost ground since 1932, they indicate that more than seven out of every ten Georgia voters were for the President early this month. The six-year trend has been:

	For Roosevelt.	Against. Roosevelt.
1932 election..	92%	8%
1936 election..	87	13
August, 1938..	72	28

The prime question of the campaign is whether the President can transfer his prestige and popularity to Lawrence Camp—whether the White House entrance into the campaign will influence sentiment

Jury Selected, Lengthy Trial Seen for Hines

Pecora Warns 12 Not to Regard Charge as Proof of Guilt.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 16.—Twelve jurors and two alternates were chosen today for the trial of James J. Hines, Tammany leader, on charges of conspiracy to give political protection to the Dutch Schultz policy gang.

All fourteen were locked up tonight in a hotel, after Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora had broken a second precedent in two days of trial by delivering a preliminary charge to them.

The jurymen were informed by the Court that all reference to the case would be clipped by attendants from newspapers and other periodicals provided them during the period of the trial. They were admonished not to talk of the case among themselves; to keep in mind that the defendant is presumably innocent unless proven otherwise; and to maintain an open mind toward the evidence about to be presented to them. They were warned that the trial, in Justice Pecora's opinion, will be "protracted."

The jurymen are Elliott R. Brown, foreman, bond salesman; Don L. Caldwell, sales manager; Hugh G. Harle, broker; Fred D. Suydam, insurance broker; Walston B. Southwick, book expert; Ernest G. Hapgood, jr., insurance salesman; Max S. Herrman, insurance salesman; Ross S. Anderson, civil engineer; Joehl Wachman, retired manufacturer; Edward Rose, civil engineer; Saul M. Dash, insurance broker; John J. Sheeran, accountant; first alternate, William D. Beckler, restaurant manager; second alternate, Bertram Cunningham, architect.

Four are Republicans and one is a Democrat. One is registered as an independent and six were unregistered as voters in 1936 and 1937. The political complexion of the case was tacitly admitted this afternoon when counsel agreed that any talesman found to be taking an active part in Republican politics would be excused.

The jury was obtained after two days of questioning, in which ap-

Senator, House Rules Chief Are Denounced as 'Betrayers.'

Attack Is Sharpest Of Party Warfare

'Your Congressman Is Ham Fish,' Retorts New Yorker.

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt yesterday bluntly called for the defeat of Senator Tydings of Maryland and Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee as New Deal "betrayers."

In a public repudiation of "those who have betrayed the New Deal in the past and will again," he singled out Tydings and O'Connor for the sharpest tongue-lashing of the Administration's party "purge."

He accused Tydings of attempting "to run with the Roosevelt prestige and the money of his conservative Republican friends both on his side" and he called O'Connor "one of the most effective obstructionists in the lower House."

Adopting the maxim of the late Teddy Roosevelt, "never hit softly," he ended all speculation on his participation in the Maryland primaries, "welcomed" reports he is aiding Representative Lewis and bludgeoned O'Connor as one who "week in and week out . . . labors to tear down New Deal strength, pickle New Deal legislation."

"Now that election time has come around again, the hidden opposition hides the ax behind its back and prepares to give the President lip service once more," he declared. As the "responsible head of the New Deal," he said there was nothing for him to do but repudiate such "hidden opposition."

Tydings Forces Silent.

The President read his statement in answer to a reporter's query on whether he will take a hand in O'Connor's race for re-election against James H. Fay in New York's Sixteenth Congressional District. Later he explained he had adopted as his own the exact words of an editorial appearing in the New New York Evening Post Monday.

Representative O'Connor was quick to "accept the challenge," but Baltimore headquarters of Senator Tydings said the Maryland Senator would make no immediate statement.

Said Representative O'Connor:

"The President saw fit to quote an editorial from a newspaper long recognized as communistic and said: 'You can interpret that as coming from me.'

"Like Senator George, I, too, accept the challenge. The voters in the Sixteenth Congressional District will alone decide who will represent them in the House of Representatives. The President lives in the Twenty-sixth Congressional District. Ham Fish (a Republican) is his Congressman."

O'Connor to Broadcast.

Senator George, of Georgia, whose defeat was asked by the President in a recent speech at Barnesville, Ga., also had "accepted the challenge." In a speech at Waycross, Ga., Monday George termed Roosevelt's interference a "second march through Georgia."

Asked if he had read George's reply, the President said he had not read all of it. He said he agreed heartily with what the Georgia Senator said about the decision lying only with the people of Georgia because he had used almost those exact words himself in his speech at Barnesville.

The President said he had received only a few letters commenting on his Georgia speech.

Confining his initial comment to a few words, Representative O'Connor told reporters he will reply to the President over a national radio net-work at the first opportunity.

Aides of Tydings said he was en route from Hagerstown, where he

Wage Dispute Halts Service On Chicago Suburban Line

By the Associated Press.

Waukegan, Ill., Aug. 16.—The United States Labor Department moved today to settle a wage controversy which brought a shutdown on the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad when a 15 per cent wage slash was rejected.

Harry E. Scheck, a Federal Department of Labor conciliator, announced he had received orders from Washington to attempt negotiations for a settlement. Some 1,300 rail workers were idle and some 20,000 commuters were forced to find other transportation.

Interpreting a refusal by the company to arbitrate the wage cut controversy as a "lockout," members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America voted to stop work early today. Their action was quickly ratified by three other unions—the Brotherhood of Electric Workers and that of locomotive firemen and enginemen, and the Order of Railway Telegraphers.

A wage scale, calling for the 15 per cent cut, was recommended by Jacob I. Grossman, Federal Court Master in Chancery, after Col. A. A. Sprague, receiver for the line, served notice a contract which expired last May would be canceled because of lack of sufficient revenue. The contract, however, was continued in force until midnight last night.

Hopkins Asked To Investigate WPA Politics

Senate Campaign Spending Committee Defers Guffey Inquiry.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday voted to ask Works Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins "what action, if any, he contemplates taking" on alleged WPA political activity in the recent Kentucky primaries.

Evidence obtained by the committee's investigator was turned over to Hopkins, with a request that he "investigate these matters."

"If the evidence holds up, we want to know what he intends to do about it," Chairman Morris Sheppard told reporters.

The committee received a "progress report" on its Kentucky WPA investigation, and voted to continue the inquiry.

New Evidence Revealed.

Hopkins recently denied the bulk of WPA political activity charges made in a series of articles in Scripps-Howard papers, after WPA made its own investigation. Hopkins said then that only two of the charges held up, and these offenders would be punished. Additional evidence of WPA participation in Kentucky politics was unearthed by committee investigators.

The campaign investigating committee yesterday decided a letter carrying a signature purported to be that of Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, "if sent to any Federal employe, involves a violation of section 208 of the U. S. criminal code."

The latter, over the name "Joseph F. Guffey," was addressed to "Fellow Democrat," and solicited "a financial contribution to the Democratic State Committee."

Guffey is in France, but his secretary, Richard H. Bailey, jr., telephoned him and told Sheppard Guffey had no knowledge of the issuance of the letter, and did not authorize it.

"The committee thinks it proper to defer action on the matter until Senator Guffey returns," said Sheppard, adding that no investigation will be ordered until Guffey personally is questioned.

To States where campaigns have been financed under "lump sum" funds, notably in Tennessee, Pennsylvania and Illinois, a new questionnaire was sent by the committee, asking for a "breakdown" of amounts received or spent in behalf of each candidate.

Sheppard said the committee has not determined what it will do if candidates are unable or refuse to comply.

Treasury Inquiry Asked.

The committee called on the Treasury Department "to conduct an investigation of the alleged poltical activities of certain employes of the Internal Revenue Bureau" in the Senatorial campaigns of Arkansas and California. Progress reports were received from committee investigators in both States, and the committee voted to continue the inquiries.

Sheppard said it was decided not to act on the request of Albert E. Hungerford, Maryland Democratic Senatorial candidate, for investigation of Senator Tydings' charges that Henry W. Webb, Maryland FHA administrator, was "guillotined" for political reasons.

President's Wife In Peace Appeal

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 16 (U.P.). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today praised President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy as "one real contribution to the peace of this continent" and offered two rules for maintaining world peace.

At opening session of the World Youth Congress on Vassar College campus, the President's wife asked 600 delegates from 52 countries to aid international peace by promoting a "spirit of tolerance" and changing personal ambitions by following the Biblical golden rule.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Working for Washington

JAMES A. RING.

Life-Long Resident, Relating Efforts of Seven Groups for District's Welfare, Finds Local Spirit Runs High.

By Christine Sadler

To many Washingtonians the District of Columbia is not an area filled with transients and absentee voters, but a place in which community spirit runs high and in which the newcomers soon become old residents. The neighborhood pattern is well established and local loyalties definite, according to James Ring, chairman of the co-ordinating committee of the Neighborhood Councils.

"Not many of the oncomers ever leave. They fit in and are on the whole ready to work for their various communities," Ring has found during a lifetime of Washington residence and many years of working with agencies that touch District life closely.

The seven Neighborhood Councils—which are sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies—are in a way "sociology classes" in which the social needs of the community are studied and welfare activities of the neighborhood inter-related.

Membership Varied.

Members are delegates from churches, civic associations, housing agencies, libraries, women's organizations, playground organizations, business and professions, and other agencies that may be at work in the community—as well as individuals unaffiliated with any other organization.

"Each Neighborhood Council watches over its segment of the community, tying up loose ends, exerting discreet pressure when and where needed, studying needs and developments, making recommendations, and bringing about greater understanding between organizations working in its area," declares the booklet in which objectives are stated.

With many statistics and studies before them, council delegates decide where the welfare program of their area is weakest and develop their plans accordingly. They may center on juvenile delinquency, housing, playgrounds, safety, health—or whatever is most needed.

"The councils endeavor to interpret to the neighborhood the social significance of conditions that exist without their boundaries," Ring says.

Former Newspaperman.

Through the co-ordinating committee which Ring heads the work is fitted into the total District picture.

The chairman is especially fitted to head the unifying committee, due to his experience in former jobs and his present "main work" as administrative assistant of the Alley Dwelling Authority. Born in Washington, Ring spent ten years in newspaper work before becoming clerk of the Senate District Committee—a job which he kept for four years.

In 1933 he made the first "real property inventory" of the District for the Public Utilities Commission. This inventory was a study of housing and housing conditions in rented dwellings of the District and furnished the ADA with its basic material.

With a $3 camera he has made many of the photographs used in the ADA work. He sees great days ahead for District housing work and considers the program to date as definitely successful. He is married, the father of a son and a daughter, and collects marine fossils as a hobby.

On Friday—Charles M. Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Experts Studying WorldWheat Quota To Boost U.S. Sales

By the Associated Press.

Government farm experts, disturbed by the prospective huge wheat surplus this year, said yesterday they were studying possibility of obtaining a long-term agreement among wheat exporting nations for a quota system to stabilize world wheat sales.

Two other plans which might be put into operation more rapidly also are under consideration for this year's crop:

A stop-gap program of export subsidies designed to put 100,000,000 bushels of this year's crop on world markets.

Loans to China for purchase of American flour.

Secretary Wallace mentioned the latter after discussing with President Roosevelt yesterday chances of expanding wheat sales abroad.

"We would like to be sure of marketing 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in world markets this year," the Secretary said.

Predicts Act Affecting 4 Millions Will Prove 'Better Business' Law.

By the United Press.

Elmer F. Andrews, 48, mild-mannered, former New York industrial commissioner, took the oath of office yesterday as national wage-hour administrator and predicted the controversial New Deal statute will help business, labor and the public.

He pledged himself to administer the law impartially and asserted that the fair labor standards act, designed to put a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours, "might well be termed a 'better business act,' both from a moral and monetary viewpoint."

Andrews estimated that the new law, which provides a 25-cents-an-hour minimum wage and a 44-hour maximum work week for the first year, will affect approximately 4,000,000 persons when it becomes effective October 24. He added that he believed it will help employment and business and tend to reduce labor disputes.

Andrews promised prompt action in setting up machinery to enforce the law and said he probably will appoint a textile industry committee "within a week." He added that the chairman of this committee, a large textile consumer, already had been selected, but declined to reveal his choice until the full committee is named.

Andrews said he hoped to avoid the "confusion" that marked early NRA days and that he hoped to limit the industry committees to about nine members each.

Andrews said rivalry between the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. for representation on industry committees would be a "real problem," and added that he hoped to solve this on the basis of organizational percentage.

He said he expected his staff would number about 1,000 persons, chosen from civil service rolls, and that he would open regional offices, probably patterned on the Social Security Board set-up.

Berry Defends Marble Claims At TVA Inquiry, Flays Accusers

Senator Blames Directors' Disharmony for Lease Controversy; Assails 'Effrontery' of Charges His Case Was 'Fraud and Blackmail.'

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, lashed out today at the Tennessee Valley Authority and persons who have accused him of "fraud" and "blackmail" in the celebrated Berry marble case.

The Senator appeared unexpectedly before a Congressional investigating committee to defend his purchase of mineral and marble leases in the Norris Dam reservoir area and subsequent claims for damages to holdings flooded by backwaters from the dam. His testimony had been scheduled for tomorrow.

Charging his property had been "confiscated" in violation of the Constitution and the act creating the TVA, Berry asserted trouble over his claims resulted from "the bitter antagonism between members of the TVA board."

This antagonism, he said, "reflected itself to a degree of establishing cliques and distrust among the personnel . . . and grew out of jealousies, suspicions and misunderstanding."

He asserted "confusion and a smoke screen developed by the TVA" had obscured the facts, and said the official record of the Berry marble case refuted accusations of "bad faith."

The Senator read from a 12-page statement defending his marble activities.

He said he went into the marble business before the TVA was created, and then made a "decent effort" to obtain damages for his "confiscated" property.

The TVA "acknowledged existence of value" to his marble, he said.

Referring to testimony by Edwin C. Eckel, TVA geologist, who had said he regarded the Berry claims as "blackmail," Berry said: "This is perhaps the most amazing piece of effrontery ever perpetuated by a man upon the pay roll of the Federal Government."

Detectives Hired To Get Evidence In Earle Inquiry

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 16 (AP).—A legislative investigating committee today hired two sleuths to collect evidence on charges lodged against Gov. Earle and 13 associates.

The "operatives," as they were termed by Committee Chairman Herbert Cohen, will go to work at once, despite the body's inactivity pending a State Supreme Court ruling on validity of a Dauphin County (Harrisburg) grand jury investigation of the same charges—extortion, blackmail and coercion.

Cohen declined to divulge identity of the investigators.

WPA Official Passes Birthday Being Robbed

Samuel A. McIntosh, director of employment at the Work Progress Administration, passed another milestone yesterday but he got off to a bad start.

When McIntosh, who lives at 3002 Rodman street northwest, awakened yesterday he was 41 instead of 40. But he also was surprised to see his room awry, his bureau drawers open and his trousers spread on the floor.

During the night, somebody had ransacked the bedroom and made off with $151; a $15 watch; four rings worth $140 and the keys to his automobile.

U. S. Urges Court To Kill Ford Suit

By the Associated Press.

The Government argued yesterday in a Supreme Court petition that it had a right to withdraw from the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals litigation involving a National Labor Board order against the Ford Motor Co.

The board had directed the Ford Co. to reinstate 29 employes at Michigan plants and to cease interference with self-organization of employes.

Solicitor General Jackson and Charles Fahy, board counsel, asked the Supreme Court to refuse to pass on a petition by the Ford Co. appealing from a decision by the circuit court at Covington, Va., in favor of the Government.

Withdrawal of the litigation was brought by the board in order to adopt new procedure.

Can We Get Him (Roosevelt) to Run? Asks Gov. Leche

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—After a meeting with co-members of the Democratic National Committee today, Gov. Richard W. Leche of Louisiana said: "It is not a question whether President Roosevelt wants to run for a third term, but whether we can get him to run."

James A. Farley, national chairman, told the meeting $350,000 was needed to finance the Democratic campaign through the rest of the year. He said the party might encounter trouble in elections in Michigan and Iowa, but, providing a business upturn continued, he predicted they would retain Federal and State offices generally. He added that he looked for the party to elect Governors in Maryland and California.

Two Ministers Quit Spanish Government

Catalan and Basque Are Replaced; Disagreed With Decrees.

By the United Press.

Barcelona (Wednesday), Aug. 17. Two members of Premier Juan Negrin's "win the war" government have resigned in a cabinet crisis of brief duration, it was announced officially today.

The resignations of Jaime Aguyade, Catalan nationalist minister of labor, and Manuel de Irujo, Basque minister without portfolio, were accepted and other positions were filled immediately.

Aguyade was replaced by Jose Moix Regas, of the unified Catalan Socialist Party, and Irujo by Tomas Bilbao, of Hospitalet, formerly Spanish consul at Perpignan, France.

The government, in a communique announcing the resignations, reaffirmed its unalterable respect "for the rights of autonomous regions," a reference to Catalonia, and expressed pleasure "to see the assured continuity of Basque and Catalan representation in the government, which thus maintains its character as a government of national union and its willingness to maintain regional liberty together with the independence and existence of Spain."

Military Decrees Blamed.

[Earlier dispatches from Perpignan, France, on the Spanish border, had asserted that Negrin himself had resigned, but there was no reference to this in the Barcelona announcement.—Editor's note.]

Decrees militarizing war industries were the reasons given for the resignations in letters presented by Aguyade and Irujo to Negrin. The letters of resignation were dated August 11, when the cabinet approved the militarization decrees.

Aguyade's letter said the decrees were "prejudicial" to Catalonia's "ideals." Irujo's letter was in like vein.

Insurgents Dynamited.

Meanwhile, Spanish loyalist "dynamiteros" revived the war around Madrid when they touched off a land mine in the ruins of University City, blasting scores of Gen. Franco's African Moors to bits.

Two lines of insurgent trenches were said to have been destroyed. Government militiamen rushed up several hundred yards and occupied them.

About 100 miles south of Madrid, Gen. Queipo de Llano's army and Gen. Juan Saliquet's force on the north swept across the Zujar River to within ten miles of the Almaden mercury mines, one of government Spain's chief sources of revenue.

Fierce Air Battle.

The loyalist defenders of Almaden and the city of Ciudad Real, 40 miles east, evacuated the town of Rueba de Alcoce ahead of the insurgent sweep and retreated to avoid entrapment.

Along the Ebro River Valley of western Catalonia, one of the fiercest air battles in months of fighting was staged as Franco's troops attempted to dislodge international brigades from their positions in the Pandos Mountains, southeast of Gandesa.

Loyalist dispatches, contradicting insurgent communiques, said the government troops still hold out in the mountains after repulsing repeated insurgent assaults.

Michigan Cyclone Injures 6, Leaves Heavy Damages

New Baltimore, Mich., Aug. 16 (AP).—A windstorm of cyclonic proportions roared in from Anchor Bay on Lake St. Clair this afternoon, and after a savage assault left at least six persons injured along with demolished buildings and leveled corn fields.

Heavy rains accompanied the storm. Residents said the wind, uprooting thousands of trees and upsetting motor cars, struck almost without warning.

Most seriously injured was 12-year-old Joseph Kratz, who was playing in the farm yard of his home on the New Baltimore highway west of the city. The wind stripped the roof and porch from the house, much of the timber landing on the boy.

Near Jasper, in Lenawee County, a similar storm struck with one injury reported. A rainfall of 2 inches was recorded in nearby Adrian, but no serious damage was reported.

Erin Go Brawl.

Portglenone, County Antrim, Ireland, Aug. 16 (AP).—A free-for-all fight between police and members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians resulted today in many injuries and nine arrests.

to protect her frontiers. When we hold maneuvers our purpose is just as peaceful as other countries. We did not make hateful comments when the English and French held maneuvers in recent weeks."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said that "the one-sided excitement over German maneuvers indicates that foreigners are not yet accustomed to the idea that Germany has become a power having equal rights with others . . . Every army in the world must train reserves and keep them in training."

As the entire Reich resounded with the sound of soldiers on the march and the rumble of anti-aircraft guns and other motorized equipment, the war ministry announced that the conscript class now serving its second year, will be released immediately after the six weeks for war games.

Antiaircraft defense on the French frontier was the main feature of the Cologne maneuvers.

Along the Belgian frontier the German troops were said to have used sunken roads, built wide enough and deep enough to permit soldiers and supplies to pass unseen by an enemy.

Rome Scores Reports.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rome, Aug. 16.—Alarmist reports of the nature of the German maneuvers printed in the foreign press, were criticized here today as unjustified and tending to harm international relations.

While admitting that the mobilization of 1,300,000 men over a period of three months is unusual, La Tribuna points out that "there is no need of particular military knowledge to understand that when a great country has been prevented for nearly 18 years from calling its conscripts to the colors, it must rectify the lack of training with continued and graduated instructions. This fact is enough to unmask these new and grossly alarmist reports about the German maneuvers, which solely confirm that country's undisputed right of self-defense.

No More Czech Troops.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Prague, Aug. 16.—With an eye on the vast military maneuvers starting in Germany, the supreme war council of Czechoslovakia decided today to take no steps which might aggravate bitter feeling between the two countries.

According to information available tonight, this means that additional troops will not be called to the Czech colors during the German mobilization period. The army will continue, however, its night and day work of strengthening the frontier by laying mines beneath roads, spreading barbed wire, building fortifications and erecting tank barriers.

The decision was reached during a 90-minute meeting at 11 o'clock this morning at Kolowrat castle, under the leadership of Premier Hodza.

Gen. Ludwig Krejci, chief of the general staff, was reported to have said that there was no evidence that the maneuvers in Germany were anything but maneuvers.

London, Aug. 16 (AP).—Belgium today opened her biggest scale war maneuvers since 1913 while her massive Eastern neighbor throbbed to the drumbeats of Hitler's similar maneuvers.

Eastern districts of Belguim, which felt the first blow of German invasion 24 years ago, had much the same appearance as in 1914.

Belgium's maneuvers coincided with reports the government had decided to fortify the nation's southern border around Marche-en-Famenne and Philippeville with concrete machine-gun nests to constitute a third line of defense in case other lines were forced to yield.

Mexican Parley Is Set for Labor Of Hemisphere

Lewis Will Be a Guest at Convention to Protect Peace, Repel Fascism.

New York, Aug. 16.—An attempt to unite the labor movements of every country in the Western Hemisphere, including the United States, into a Pan-American federation of labor, designed to improve working conditions, to aid in preventing war and to repel the economic incursions of Fascist nations into Central and South America, will be made at a series of three congresses, to be held in Mexico City during the first ten days of September.

The congresses are all under the general sponsorship of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (C. T. M.), and will be divided as follows: The first one on social work, the second labor conditions, and the last on ways of promoting international peace and fighting fascism.

Among those who have signified their intention of appearing as "guests" are some of the world's outstanding labor leaders.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, has signified his intention of being present. The American Federation of Labor will not be represented. Others who will attend are Leon Jouhaux, head of the French General Confederation of Labor, who confers frequently with the French cabinet; Edo Fimmen, Dutch-born secretary general of the International Transport Workers Federation, which has 2,000,000 members in European and South American countries, and Gonzales Pena, general secretary of the Spanish Federation of Labor, C. N. T.

The actual chairman of the congress will be Vincente Lombardo Toledano, head of the C. T. N. and a strong admirer of Lewis.

Paris, Aug. 16.—Leon Jouhaux is going to America to try to interest American labor leaders in drawing up a common plan of action by American and French trade union organizations to defend peace and democracy against possible attacks.

Jouhaux, before embarking, admitted that he would be a month in America and that he planned to discuss measures for "defending the peace of the world" with American labor leaders of both the C. I. O. and A. F. L.

Meanwhile, Japanese planes again bombed the area around China's provisional capital in Hankow, wrecking railway terminals and destroying factories, warehouses and homes. Scores of Chinese were killed. Canton and South China cities and railways also were bombed again.

In Tokyo the Japanese cabinet reiterated its determination not to make peace with Gen. Chiang even if he offers to surrender after the impending Japanese military occupation of Hankow, to carry on the war to a "knockout victory" and to take whatever measures may be necessary to repel Russian pressure on Japan.

Tokyo Cabinet Approves Plans For 'Reconstruction' of China

No New Regime Expected Immediately; Diplomatic Policy 'More Vigorous;' Mobilization for Long War Also Decided.

Special Cable to The Post.

Tokyo, Aug. 16.—With the fall of Hankow, China's provisional capital, regarded as imminent, the Japanese cabinet approved today "the highest policies for dealing with the China incident" which had been formulated at a series of meetings held by a five-minister conference over the last two months.

The policies decided upon cover the whole field of military, diplomatic and economic developments in China, being described in a statement issued to the press as follows:

The necessary steps to be taken to insure the collapse of the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and reconstruction of a new China.

The diplomacy to be adopted to meet the situation arising from the China incident.

The more vigorous mobilization of national resources, material and spiritual, to carry protracted hostilities and finally to establish a permanent peace in east Asia.

Indications of the nature of these decisions were scant. Finance Minister Seihin Ikeda told newspapermen last Saturday there was "no reason to believe that the reduction of Hankow will settle the China incident, and the time has not yet come to make the concrete plans for the long-range reconstruction of China which will be necessary after Chiang's collapse."

Thus the reconstruction plans referred to in today's announcement clearly must be of a provisional character. Usually well-informed quarters here took the view that for the moment no change in the Chinese administration of the area under Japanese occupation was contemplated, and that the reconstruction referred to was simply consolidation of the Japanese economic interests in the area.

Meanwhile accusations that the Soviet army attempted to change its position at Changkufeng after the truce were followed by a protest by Foreign Commissar Litvinoff that the Japanese forces had done this very thing.

The Korean garrison command estimated tonight Soviet casualties in the Changkufeng border fray at 4,500, as compared with 898 Japanese casualties reported yesterday. The same communique added that the Japanese forces had destroyed 116 Soviet guns, destroyed or disabled 96 tanks, brought down three planes and forced four others to land, and destroyed three machine guns.

2 Men Confess Kidnaping Girl And D.C. Escort

Thugs Feared Stolen Auto Report, So Abducted Pair, Agents Say.

By the Associated Press.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 16.—Two former convicts from Missouri, one seriously wounded, tonight faced a possible death penalty for a kidnaping officers believed was perpetrated only to obtain an escape automobile.

Otis J. Meredith, 21, lay in the hospital here, guarded by a Federal agent who listened for every word he said, while John Couch, 23, was held in jail.

They were captured last night by two Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and two deputy sheriffs who found them cleaning fish at the farmhouse of Charles Root, Meredith's father-in-law, in the brush country east of Effie, about 45 miles north of here.

Meredith was dropped by pistol and shotgun fire before he had run 60 feet, while Couch submitted quietly. Meredith's young wife and her father saw the captures.

Miss Peggy Gross, St. Louis socialite, and Daniel Cox Fahey, jr., St. Louis architect and former resident of Washington, D. C., the kidnaping victims, were seized as they sat in a car at St. Louis early Saturday and bound with wire when they were abandoned in woods north of Minneapolis, as their abductors continued their flight in Fahey's car.

District Attorney Victor Anderson, in St. Paul, who filed kidnap charges against Meredith and Couch, said he probably would demand the death penalty, which is possible when victims are harmed. Fahey said he was struck in the face with a gun butt and both he and the girl were bound with wire.

Robert Hendon, in charge of the FBI office at St. Paul, said the suspects confessed the kidnaping and a series of crimes in the Southwest.

Dodge Killed Trying to Aid Her, Says Wife

By the United Press.

Little Current, Ont., Aug. 16.—The pretty young bride of Daniel G. Dodge, heir to a $9,000,000 automobile fortune who was drowned yesterday in Georgian Bay, tonight said she believed her husband fell accidentally from a speedboat in which he was being rushed to a hospital here.

Meanwhile fishermen dragged the channel, about 90 feet deep at the point where Dodge went overboard, trying to find his body.

Dodge and his 18-year-old bride, a former $15-a-week telephone operator at Gore Bay, Ont., were honeymooning on the 21-year-old sportsman's Manitoulin Island camp, 20 miles from here, when both were injured by a dynamite explosion.

It was first believed that Dodge, maddened by the agony of a shattered arm and a fractured skull, jumped from the boat while his wife and two helpers were rushing to a hospital.

Today Mrs. Dodge, herself badly injured by bits of flying glass from the explosion, said at the hospital:

"I felt like I was going to faint. I believe my husband tried to stand up to reach for the wheel to relieve me. But the effort was too much and he toppled into the water."

The tragic climax to the romance of the young couple, which began three years ago when young Dodge was vacationing in the north woods near Gore Bay, occurred as a result of Dodge's effort to find out whether some dynamite left at the camp, was "still good."

Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson, mother of the young millionaire, was reported under the care of a physicial at her huge Rochester, Mich., estate.

Jury to Consider Van Wyck Sanity In Marital Strife

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Whether Prescott Van Wyck, wealthy connoisseur of Indian pottery and dark-eyed Latin ladies, married Mozellecita Stapp at Elkton, Md., last March because he was crazy about her—or just plain crazy—was laid before a sheriff's jury today.

Miss Stapp, the 38-year-old artist's former secretary, insists it was the former. His mother, Mrs. Florence Van Wyck, produced two witnesses instead, who swore that Van Wyck ate his dinner in the nude, never took a bath, sent messages to the former Kaiser, the Queen of Holland and President Roosevelt and, as his mother put it, manifested other "delusions."

Accidental Fall Is Fatal to Head Of Maryland Firm

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 16 (AP).—A verdict of accidental death was returned today in the death of Capt. Walter Sherman, about 62, whose body was found wedged between a wharf and boat early this morning.

Capt. Sherman was president of the H. F. Brannock & Co., sail and awning makers, and also operated a seafood establishment.

A coroner's physician said he probably fell from a platform on the second floor of the building in which he maintained his office.

The coroner's physician reported Capt. Sherman struck the boat in the fall from the platform. He was cut and bruised about the head and it was believed he was knocked unconscious by the blow and drowned.

Md. Sweet Potatoes Look Like Caricatures

Prince Frederick, Md., Aug. 16 (AP). Charles H. Alton unearthed a crop of surprises when he dug his sweet potatoes. The usually uninteresting oblate spheroid tubers have inexplicably gone haywire. Queer contortions of the tubers are the rule, some resembling caricatures of faces and figures.

Alton said the weather may have caused the strange growths.

Lawson Guilty Of Conversion; May Face Jury

Illegal Use of $75,000 Charged to Baltimore's Ex-Police Head.

Baltimore, Aug. 16 (AP).—Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut today found Baltimore's stock broker-police commissioner, William P. Lawson, guilty of using $75,000 of his brokerage customers' property, and left the possibility Lawson's case would be presented to the Baltimore grand jury tomorrow.

At the close of an injunction action brought against the commissioner by the Securities and Exchange Commission, Judge Chestnut held that "there is no doubt that the acts charged to William P. Lawson are contrary to law."

United States Attorney Bernard Flynn called conference with SEC attorneys to determine what further action the Federal Government would take against Lawson.

The police commissioner, helf-suspended from duty, announced yesterday he had liquidated his firm. The Government seeks to restrain him from operating a brokerage in the future.

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 16.—Harvest of a peach crop estimated at 150,000 bushels was begun this week in Franklin County orchards.

He estimated the crop in the Scotland section would be 80 per cent of the bumper crop of last year and the yield in the Waynesboro area 70 per cent of the 1937 harvest.

Detectives yesterday raided a summer cottage on the Virginia shore of the Potomac in a futile attempt to find the slayers of George E. Sanford, 20, of 1213 K street southeast.

Led by Detective Lieut. George Darnall, homicide squad chief, the men went to the cottage on a tip. The place is across the river from Glen Echo.

No evidence was found of the fugitives.

Police last night admitted they have made no progress since Saturday when Sanford's companions were identified. They said they so far have not learned where the shooting took place or why.

One man was still being held at the Fifth Precinct station. He told investigators he was with Sanford and the others Saturday morning, but left for home before the trouble started.

Md. Growers See Plot to Fix Tobacco Prices

Prince Georges Farmers Lay Ruin to Buyers in Stormy Meeting.

Angered by their failure to make money from their crops, Prince Georges County tobacco growers met in a schoolhouse at Mitchellsville, Md., last night and declared that a "price-fixing" policy among leading tobacco buyers was responsible for their losses.

Until a late hour last night the meeting was still in session and no resolutions had been formally adopted. Tempers flared among the tobacco farmers, however, and several declared from the floor that the policy of the buyers was, in effect, a restraint of trade and should be investigated by the Federal Government.

Spokesmen asserted that the average price per pound of tobacco had dropped from 21 cents last year to 10¾ cents this season. As a result, they said, they were all losing money on their crops.

Much of the tobacco crop from the area is sent to Baltimore. Farmers maintained that the per pound price has been cut through collusion among the buyers.

Several speakers predicted that unless conditions were bettered many of the growers who are tenant farmers will be thrown on relief this winter.

A committee was named to meet with committees from the other tobacco-growing counties in southern Maryland—Charles, St. Mary's, Calvert and Anne Arundel—to consider action to be taken for improvement of conditions among the growers.

'Mother Willey,' Soldiers,' Sailors' Friend, Dies at 76

Soldiers, sailors and marines in all parts of the world mourn the death of Mrs. Edith V. Willey, 76, who during her residence in Washington was known as "Mother Willey" to thousands of service men. She died yesterday in Forest Hills, Long Island, where she and her husband, Samuel H. Willey, lived since his retirement in 1936 after 32 years as proofreader on The Post.

MRS. EDITH WILLEY.

Her home was always open and a supply of sandwiches on hand for those who were hungry. Grateful men remembered her with letters from ports all over the globe.

As "Mother of the Marine Corps," Mrs. Willey conducted the Belleau Woods memorial services each year.

The Willeys observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary here in November, 1933. Mrs. Willey recalled at that time how she crossed the word "obey" from their marriage ceremony, declaring, "I wouldn't obey any man who draws breath." Nevertheless, they never had a "fuss" in all their years of married life, she maintained.

Hull, on Air, Gives Plea for Peace to World

Hull

tion of provisions of treaties, when and as need therefor arises, by orderly processes carried out in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and accommodation.

"We elieve in, we support, and we recommend voluntary self-restraint, abstention from use of force in pursuit of policy and from interference in the internal affairs of other nations, and the settle- of differences by processes of peaceful negotiation and agree ment.

"We believe in, we support, and we recommend to all nations that they be prepared to limit and progressively reduce their armaments.

Urges Collaboration.

"We believe in, we support and we recommend collaboration between and among representatives of the nations, and in the freest possible intellectual interchange between and among their peoples— to the end that thereby understanding by each country of the problems of others and of problems that are common to all may be promoted and peaceful adjustment of controversies be made more readily possible.

"We believe in, we support and we recommend international cooperation in such ways and by such methods as may be practicable for the advancement of this program."

Hull told the nations that no one of them, including our own, "can avoid participation in determining which course (force or reason) will be taken." He added that "consciously or unconsciously, every country is throwing the weight of its attitude and action, positive or negative, toward one course or the other."

Plea to Small Nations.

Officials indicated he was speaking particularly to the smaller nations which have been coming under the sway of Germany, especially in the Balkans.

Officials believed he had Germany, Japan and Italy in mind when he said:

"The disintegration of the structure of world order under law and the abandonment or repudiation of the principles underlying it have proceeded with staggering rapidity.

"Today, invasion of territory of soverign states, destrucion of lawfully-constituted governments and forcible seizure of hitherto independent political entities, interference in the internal affairs of other nations, wholesale violation of established treaty obligations, growing disregard of universally accepted principles of international law, attempts to adjust international differences by armed force rather than by methods of pacific settlement, contemptuous brushing aside of rules of morality—all those appalling manifestations of disintegration seriously threaten the very foundations of our civilization."

Americans Warned.

Hull brought the danger home to the average American by saying: "No one of us can be sure that his country or even his home is safe.

"Whatever may be our own wishes and hopes, we cannot, when there is trouble elsewhere, expect to remain unaffected. When destruction, impoverishment and starvation afflict other areas, we cannot, no matter how hard we may try, escape impairment of our own economic well-being. When freedom is destroyed over increasing areas elsewhere, our ideals of individual liberty, our most cherished political and social institutions, are jeopardized."

Hence he pleaded for American support of his program.

As more and more nations accept the United States' program, he concluded, "it will become more clear—even to the nations which now profess to place their reliance solely on a policy of armed force—that the overwhelming majority of mankind is determined to live in a world in which lawlessness will not be tolerated, in which order under law will prevail and in which peaceful economic and cultural relationships will be inviolate."

Britain Applauds Speech.

London, Aug. 16 (AP).—Britain tonight warmly welcomed the speech of Secretary of State Hull, which was interpreted here as raising a danger sign against German ambitions in central Europe.

Press and pulpit are increasingly laudatory toward the prospect of Anglo-American collaboration, and recently a part of the press has been hinting it would be a good idea if King George would tour America.

France Concurs.

Paris, Aug. 16 (AP).—High officials and spokesmen at the French foreign office enthusiastically praised Secretary of State Hull's speech tonight, saying "the sentiments he expresses are those of France." The French press, following the lead of the foreign ministry, printed large extracts of the speech, some of the papers headlining it, "America's Warning to the Totalitarian States."

Fascists Angered.

Rome (Wednesday), Aug. 17 (AP). Fascists learned of Secretary of State Hull's speech today with mounting displeasure. A few newspapers received brief accounts of it but the semiofficial news agency, Stefani, distributed nothing about it last night.

Memphis Suspect Slain by G-Men

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Two Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, in a gun battle in the downtown section of this city, tonight killed a man tentatively identified as Fred Truesdale.

Leo Nulty, one of the G-men in the gun battle, suffered a painful flesh wound in the thigh. His condition was not serious.

Secretary Hull's Address on Foreign Policy

Following is the text of Secretary Hull's radio address on foreign policy delivered on a national broadcast last night:

All nations have a primary interest in peace with justice, in economic well-being with stability, and in conditions or order under law. These are constant objectives of this country. Each of these objectives is today seriously jeopardized in many parts of the world. All governments and all peoples should therefore be on guard against certain dangerous developments which imperil them, and be alive to the issues involved.

Out of these menacing developments there has arisen and there confronts the nations today a clear-cut issue: Is the future of the world to be determined by universal reliance upon armed force and frequent resort to aggression, with resultant autarchy, impoverishment, loss of individual independence, and international anarchy? Or will practices of peace, morality, justice and order under law, resting upon sound foundations of economic well-being, security and progress, guide and govern in international relations?

As modern science and invention bring nations ever closer together, the time approaches when, in the very nature of things, one or the other of these alternatives must prevail. In a smaller and smaller world it will soon no longer be possible for some nations to choose and follow the way of force and for other nations at the same time to choose and follow the way of reason. All will have to go in one direction and by one way. The first of the alternative ways leads through military adventuring to international lawlessness, the result of which is chaos and loss of the precious values which, through centuries of struggle, toil and sacrifice, civilized nations have slowly achieved. The other way leads, through exercise of moral restraint and observance of international obligations and treaties to conditions of order based upon law, giving security and facilitating progress.

In the circumstances which prevail in the world today, no nation and no government can avoid participation in determining which course will be taken. The issue is fundamental. Consciously or unconsciously, every country is throwing the weight of its attitude and action, positive or negative, toward one course or the other. The degree to which each nation will influence the ultimate decision will depend on the earnestness with which it espouses and supports the principles on the side of which it chooses to range itself.

The World War left a legacy of deep-seated maladjustments within and among nations. But out of it also emerged a passionate desire among peoples everywhere for enduring peace, order and progress.

For a decade following the Peace of Versailles, the peoples of the world worked earnestly toward those ends, and considerable progress was made. But unhappily the rapid growth of economic nationalism following as an aftermath of the war culminated in 1929 in world-wide economic catastrophe. Political controversies and conflict, aggravated and intensified by world-wide depression, undermined the whole structure of world economy and of law and order among the nations.

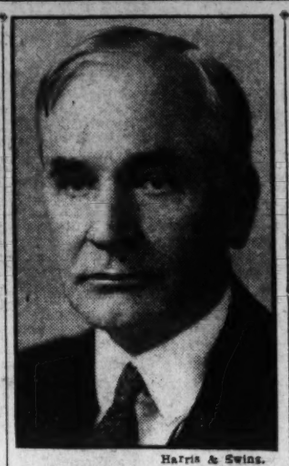

Economic stability, financial stability, social stability, and in the last analysis political stability, are all parts of an arch resting upon the foundation of trade. No modern industrial nation can maintain proper existing standards of living without international trade. Raw materials and other commodities are indispensable for the maintenance of industrial processes; and foreign markets for the sale of a nation's products are likewise indispensable for its economic life. Shut off from international trade, nations face deterioration and decline.

As trade barriers mounted on every side, as the movement toward economic nationalism gathered momentum, it became only too clear that either the excessive trade barriers between nations must be reduced or the pressures of nations to gain access to needed raw materials and to equally necessary foreign markets by conquest of additional territory and tactics of the mailed fist would become intensified.

Against this world background this country embarked upon a program for the reduction or elimination of excessive trade barriers and for the elimination of uneconomic trade discriminations and other unfair trade methods. In 1934, the Congress passed the trade agreements act for the achievement of these purposes. Since then our country has vigorously engaged in trade-agreement negotiations with an increasing number of countries and it has tirelessly urged upon other nations the imperative need of pursuing a similar course.

Concurrently with efforts to restore international commerce upon this constructive basis, we have also pursued—and have urged upon other nations—parallel and complementary policies in the field of finance—restoration of stability of foreign exchanges and of monetary conditions, and the inviolability of financial obligations and undertakings.

Unfortunately, as time has gone on, the disintegration of the structure of world order under law and the abandonment or repudiation of the principles underlying it, have proceeded with staggering rapidity. Orderly and peaceful processes and methods of international co-operation have in many regions given way to military aggression and armed force. Today, invasion of territory of sovereign states, destruction of lawfully constituted governments and forcible seizure of hitherto independent political entities, interference in the internal affairs of other nations, wholesale violation of established treaty obligations, growing disregard of universally accepted principles of international law, attempts to adjust international differences by armed force rather than by methods of pacific settlement, contemptuous brushing aside of rules of morality—all these appalling manifestations of disintegration seriously threaten the very foundations of our civilization.

Harris & Swins.

CORDELL HULL.

In as much as the processes of disintegration and deterioration in international relations are plainly spreading in many directions, the curative processes must be no less broad in scope and more effective in character. Not only has the rebuilding of a sound economic structure become absolutely essential, but the re-establishing of order under law in relations among nations has become imperatively necessary. Hence, while continuing and intensifying our effort to promote economic reconstruction, the Government of the United States has enlarged the scope of its effort and is urging upon all nations adoption of a comprehensive program embracing both economic reconstruction and revitalizing of principles which are indispensable for restoration of order under law.

There is and there can be no doubt as to the preference and desire of the people of this country. We want peace; we want security; we want progress and prosperity—for ourselves and for all nations. Our practical problem is that of finding and employing the best methods, of keeping our eyes and our feet upon the better way, of co-operating with other nations that are seeking as are we to proceed along that way. On this problem the Government of the United States has been and is constantly at work. Toward its solution, we sought at the conference at Buenos Aires in December, 1936, to broaden our combined economic and peace program by proposing and urging upon peaceful nations everywhere adoption of a program based on principles of world law and international order. This program calls for constant reaffirmation, revitalization, and stressing of fundamental principals. Its essential points cannot be too often stated.

We believe in, we support and we recommend to all nations economic reconstruction as the foundation of national and international well-being and stability.

We believe in, we support and we recommend adherence to the basic principles of international law as the guiding and governing rules of conduct among nations.

We believe in, we support and we recommend respect for and observance of treaties, including, in connection therewith, modification of provisions of treaties, when and as need therefor arises, by orderly processes carried out in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and accommodation.

We believe in, we support, and we recommend voluntary self-restraint, abstention from use of force in pursuit of policy and from interference in the internal affairs of other nations, and the settlement of differences by processes of peaceful negotiation and agreement.

We believe in, we support, and we recommend to all nations that they be prepared to limit and progressively reduce their armaments.

We believe in, we support and we recommend collaboration between and among representatives of the nations, and in the freest possible intellectual interchange between and among their peoples —to the end that thereby understanding by each country of the problems of others and of problems that are common to all may be promoted and peaceful adjustment of controversies be made more readily possible.

We believe in, we support and we recommend international cooperation in such ways and by such methods as may be practicable for the advancement of this program.

Taken as a whole, this program envisages continuous progress over a high and open road toward long-view objectives. We are convinced that this program offers to all nations the maximum of possible advantage and the fullest possible opportunity to safeguard and promote their own welfare and with it that of the world community of which they are members. We are also convinced that no other program can in the long run check and reverse the present ominous drift toward international anarchy and armed conflict on a gigantic scale which, if it comes, will destroy not only the material achievements of past centuries but the precious cultural and spiritual attainments of our modern civilization.

The Government of the United States, with the support of an alert public opinion in this country, has earnestly sought and is seeking to make appropriate contribution to the carrying out of this program.

The people of this country are each day more accurately visualizing the conditions which prevail and more fully understanding the problems that are involved in international relations. They are becoming increasingly concerned over the spread of international lawlessness and its adverse effect upon the present and future welfare of our own country.

Each day's developments make more and more clear the fact that our own situation is profoundly affected by what happens elsewhere in the world.

Whatever may be our own wishes and hopes, we cannot when there is trouble elsewhere expect to remain unaffected. When destruction, impoverishment and starvation afflict other areas, we cannot, no matter how hard we may try, escape impairment of our own economic well-being. When freedom is destroyed over increasing areas elsewhere, our ideals of individual liberty, our most cherished political and social institutions are jeopardized.

When the dignity of the human soul is denied in great parts of the world, and when that denial is made a slogan under which propaganda is set in motion and armies take the field, no one of us can be sure that his country or even his home is safe. We all know, of course, that a condition of wholesale chaos will not develop overnight; but it is clear that the present trend is in that direction and the longer this drift continues the greater becomes the danger that the whole world may be sucked into a maelstrom of unregulated and savage economic, political and military competition and conflict.

Hence it is necessary that as a nation we become increasingly resolute in our desire and increasingly effective in our efforts to contribute along with other peoples—always within the range of our traditional policies of non-entanglement—to the support of the only program which can turn the tide of lawlessness and place the world firmly upon the one and only roadway that can lead to enduring peace and security.

So far as this country is concerned, we shall continue to do everything in our power toward keeping alive and fostering and cultivating the various features of this broad and comprehensive program, a program in which we most sincerely believe, to which we give our constant support, and which we earnestly recommend to all other governments and peoples for general adoption.

As more and more nations accept this program and demonstrate their will to work together for the restoration of sound economic relations, of international morality, and of the principles of international law and justice, it will become more clear—even to the nations which now profess to place their reliance solely on a policy of armed force—that the overwhelming majority of mankind is determined to live in a world in which lawlessness will not be tolerated, in which order under law will prevail, and in which peaceful economic and cultural relationships will be inviolate.

Inquiry to Sift U. S. Officials' Link to Bridges

charge which the C. I. O.'s West Coast "strong man' always has denied. Sullivan's report asserted that alleged "protection" by officials is "common knowledge" on the Pacific Coast.

Dies said the committee would meet in secret session today to hear an undisclosed witness from the West Coast who supposedly has "definite information" regarding the alleged "protection" of Bridges. He said the testimony may later be repeated in public hearings.

The Bridges issue was precipitated when Thomas, a committee member, charged that numerous Federal agencies are giving the inquiry "the run-around" and demanded a "show-down."

Earlier Frey charged that Communists had made inroads into key positions in C. I. O. unions, and Walter S. Steele, editor of the magazine National Republic, alleged that un-American forces in this country are spending more than $10,000,000 annually to bring the 20,000,000 alien-born residents of the United States under their "following and allegiance."

Steele, claiming to represent 114 patriotic organizations, said that six major un-American "menaces" face the United States in communism, socialism, naziism, anarchism, utra-pacificism and atheism.

He said that while official membership of the Communist Party is only 75,000, it actually is much stronger, controlling more than 800,000 persons in the New York area alone.

"New York and California are clearing houses for instructions from abroad for revolutionary activities in Latin America and certain other countries," he said.

"It will be shown that representatives of certain foreign governments are attending meetings of these un-American forces in our country and that at least in one instance a gathering was held in one of the embassies with some of our Government officials present and that a change in our foreign policies was considered at this gathering."

Steele gave the committee a list of 640 organizations allegedly affiliated with the Communist movement, and said that the party's 1936 and 1937 income exceeded $700,000, of which $146,000 came from dues.

He charged that Communists made use of "well-known Wall Street figures" to further their cause, but admitted, under questioning by Thomas, that "the only person I can think of off-hand is the son of Lamont, who is a partner in the Morgan firm—Corliss Lamont, who heads the Friends of the Soviet Union in this country."

Asked whether any of the financing came from Russia, Steele recalled that "an A. F. of L. leader said two years ago during the West Coast marine strike that the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, received $75,000 from the Communist Party and that the Justice Department had in its possession the canceled check for the payment."

After the hearing, Dies said he would ask the Justice Department to turn over the check and its entire files in connection with the case.

Frey, who concluded three days of testimony before the committee, charged that Communists are "spreading their doctrines" into Federal relief and theater projects through the Workers Alliance, an organization of Works Progress Administration employes.

He said that C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis, aware of the infiltration of Communists into his organization, has "become more active politically in an effort to bolster his strength" and that the membership is being "purged" of alleged Reds.

WALTER STEELE.

A curious ramification of the effort of the Dies committee to show communistic influences in the C.I.O. was he release of a small iem yesterday by the La Follette Committee on Civil Liberties to the effect that it had received from the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., of Youngstown, Ohio, vouchers showing paymen's to the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., commonly regarded as a "strike-breaking" organization, for labor espionage.

It developed that the person supposed to be involved by the vouchers was the senior investigator for the Dies committee, Edward Sullivan. This was denied by Sullivan, who was queried on the subject by Representative Dies.

Monday two investigators for the La Follette committee attended the Dies committee hearing. A Dies committeeman invited them to occupy front seats. They made no move to accept the invitation. The La Follette men were openly derisive later of progress made by the Dies committee.

Hines

peared a rising temper of conflict between District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and the chief counsel for the defense, Lloyd Paul Stryker. Of 20 peremptory challenges permitted each side, Stryker used up 18 and Dewey 15. Of the four peremptory challenges permitted them for the selection of the two alternates, Stryker used three and the prosecutor two.

The jury was completed at 3:35 p. m. today, and after a recess it required 2 hours and 13 minutes to obtain the two alternates from 15 veniremen.

With all 14 jurymen selected, Justice Pecora addressed them. On the first day of the trial he had broken a precedent by adopting in a Supreme Court trial the Federal Court practice of having prospective jurors questioned as a group instead of singly. His preliminary charge to the jury tonight was another innovation.

Law Laid Down.

"The law," he said, "requires upon the submission to a jury of a criminal action that the Court give certain instructions with regard to principles of law governing the case . . .

"The Court will at the proper time give you these instructions. There are one or two principles, however, that I think should be impressed upon you at the very outset for the discharge of your duties as trial jurors. . . The indictment is a mere written accusation. From it you must not infer any guilt on the part of the defendant.

"The indictment carries with it no implication of any guilt on the part of the defendant. The defendant is clothed by law, from this time on, and in fact from the commencement of this trial, with the presumption of innocence . . . According of those rights to the defendant lies at the very foundation of the giving to him of a fair and impartial trial and it is for that reason that I am giving you this instruction at this time, in addition to giving it to you, as I will at the end of the case.

Warns on Discussion.

"As I indicated to such of you as had been sworn in as trial jurors before the close of the session yesterday afternoon, the court deems it in the interest of justice to keep this jury together during the entire trial. The court will see to it, by every power that it possesses, that every reasonable comfort is furnished you while you are kept together. I want you to inform the court at any time through your foreman of anything the court may do, reasonably and properly, for your care and comfort and convenience during the trial.

"You are not to discuss this case at any time during the trial, either among yourselves or with anyone else. Nor are you to discuss any subject relating to or concerning this case, either among yourselves or with anyone else.

"You are not to read anything about this case in any kind of publication. The court officers who will attend you have instructions from the court to delate from any newspapers or periodicals that may be furnished to you all references to this case. If perchance that may be overlooked, inadvertently or otherwise, and you come across in any newspaper or other publication anything concerning this case, do not read it."

Before recessing until 10 a. m., tomorrow, when opening addresses of counsel for prosecution and defense are to be delivered, Justice Pecora excused the remaining unchosen talesmen, and they bolted for the door of the courtroom.

Look Refreshed.

When court opened at 10 a. m., the six jurors chosen yesterday filed into the jury box, looking refreshed after their night's sleep. Six more talesmen, two of whom were to find their places in the finally picked jury, were called quickly into the row behind them.

Dewey asked whether any of the talesmen were acquainted with any figures in the case or on its fringes; whether they would give equal credence to the testimony of black men and white; whether the fact that some of "the people's witnesses" would be men with criminal records, or men who had themselves been defendants in the case until they turned State's evidence would prevent the jurymen from giving their testimony due credence.

Dewey was ingratiating, low voiced, continuously smiling. Stryker, far taller and heavier than the prosecutor, carried himself with a certain bluff camaraderie toward the talesmen, an air which changed into outraged dignity at some of Dewey's questions or comments.

Dewey's Remarks.

"I've been prosecuting in New York for seven years," Mr. Dewey reminded the talesmen. "Has there been anything in the conduct of my office that has prejudiced you against me?"

"If I told you that I was prosecuting here in New York many years before Dewey even came here, would you hold that against me?" was one of Stryker's questions. Stryker accused the prosecutor of trying to create a courtroom "atmosphere" that would be detrimental to the man on trial and scoffed at Dewey's remark to the talesmen that he was a great reader of detective stories. "I guess we all are," said Stryker.

Opposing counsel used their first peremptory challenges of the day against Talesmen Dew and Parker, Dewey asking that Dew be excused and Stryker objecting to Parker, without indicating any reason.

Knew Magistrate.

The departure of Dew from the witness box was foreshadowed when he informed Dewey that he was an acquaintance of Magistrate Hulon R. Capshaw, whom Dewey has named as being under the influence of Mr. Hines in the Tammany district leader's alleged practice of protecting policy racketeers. It was brought out further that Dew was a Southerner, a Virginian. Magistrate Capshaw hails from Tennessee. It was in the questioning of Dew that the first and sharpest flare-up between opposing counsel occurred—a spat that drew upon Dewey an admonition from Justice Pecora to be careful.

Stryker said:

"Justice Capshaw has not been named as a defendant," he said. "Ordinarily when a man is charged with something he is charged with it, but here he is mentioned in a bill of particulars. Mr. Dewey was slightly in error, I think, when he said that Mr. Hines was supposed to have bribed or intimidated or influenced him. That is not what the bill says. The bill says that Mr. Hines or some of the other defendants, not one of whom is on trial here, for various reasons—or conspirators—that is the charge. I don't know whether Judge Capshaw will be a witness in this case or not, but suppose he is—would it make it difficult for you to pass on his credibility because in this rather indirect fashion in this bill of particulars this charge has been leveled against him?"

Dewey Objects.

District Attorney Dewey was on his feet, protesting with some semblance of heat. "I object to questions which are a snide manner of attacking a bill of particulars which was ordered by the Court at the request of defense counsel."

"One moment," Stryker almost shouted. "I am going to protest right now against that word.

"I am going to ask your honor to admonish the district attorney not to use language like that."

Justice Pecora intervened gravely. "The jury is instructed to disregard the characterization of 'snide,' and counsel on both sides should abstain from all such characterization throughout this trial. I am admonishing both of you now to refrain from any such characterizations throughout the trial."

As Stryker turned back to the jury box he walked over to where the district attorney was seated and for a long minute glared at him with such an expression of disdain that the courtroom was moved to laughter.

At Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

Personal appearance of Corinne Griffith! Time, this evening at the "Redskins' Pow Wow" on the Shoreham Terrace.

Though Corinne has starred in many movies, we'll wager this is the first time she's been leading lady for a football team. Also getting into the pow wow at the mike will be "Slinging Sammy" Baugh, "Turk" Edwards, captain of the Redskins; Coach Ray Flaherty and Barnee, the team's maestro.

The current terrace floor show includes a strangely vampirish number. It's the "cape dance" of Harris and Yvonne Ashburn. But for all her siren wiles Yvonne is a Washington girl, late of Central High School and George Washington U.

Practically a genius in taps is Johnny Barnes (another young former Washingtonian), now at Bamboo Gardens. He's doing a rhythm clog, Harlem swing and Bill Robinson numbers. Johnny's fall prospects are bright. He's due to either join a new Rogers & Hart musical or go to London with Dave Apollon's revue. He wants to put in a couple of years in musical comedy and then take a whack at the movies. Tomorrow he'll be 25 years old. Happy birthday, Johnny! Other good Bamboo acts are George Horne, ventriloquist (assisted by Sailor Oscar, espia Henry); the Three Novelettes, dancing blond lovelies; Fire Eater Herbert Loe.

Surprises:

Powhatan Roofers had a grand surprise Monday evening when vacationing Jack Derwin, who regularly sings in the rainbow room of New York's Rockefeller Center, stepped up to the mike and sang number after number.

To make it even, we understand that the crowd at 1 Fifth avenue, New York, were properly gratified when our visiting Perry Martin (Mayfair) stepped into the limelight last Saturday eve and showed them some real barytoning.

A versatile young creature is Marian Dawn, of the Lotus. When she sings "Let Me Whisper I Love You," she seems purely a sweet singer. But when she goes into "Old Man Mose," you decide the girl's a comedienne at heart.

Lotus' new and flossy show includes Yvonne and Everett, ballroom dancers and very sleek ones; rhythm stepper, Gene Clayton; tapstress, Virginia Brown. The Chester Doherty girls do "Paris in Swing" with undertones of "Diane" and a frolicking Hungarian dance.

Tonight's "Big Apple Revival Night" down at Pine Grove. Meaning that there'll be "Big Appling" at frequent intervals all evening. While it's always cool down at Pine Grove, the music's pretty Steamy. It's our guess that if you do all the "Apple" numbers, you'll need reviving.

Hans Lube (said to have been the best darned chef in Philadelphia) is now in town busily planning menus for the new Hour Glass, opening next Monday. Chef Lube will bring his own pastry chef down from Philly to make fancy pies, delish hot breads.

Ernestine Gardner (Wardman's Metronome Room) is all primed to pop "Small Fry" through the mike most any evening now. It's Hogie Carhichael's newest and promises to be another "A-Tisket, A-Tasket."

There's a pretty authentic rumor that Helen Forrest (now vacationing from Madrillon) will join a big New York name band this fall after she finishes in "Going Native."

Coolers—Offer:

Any of the Waldteufel waltzes as played with glitter and precision by Durward Bowersox, violinist of the Rainbow Room.

"Spring Is Here" as sung in the always springlike Mayflower Lounge by Bobby Simpson.

Glen Echo is already getting set for its annual biggest party, the Capital Transit outing, booked for Thursday, August 25. This event, which always crams Echo to the gunwales, marks the only day in the year in which there's afternoon dancing in the Spanish ball room—to Dave McWilliams' music, of course.

"Biff" Johnson is leading Brinkley's ork, and very ably, while Jack Torry does his summer turn in the Marine Reserve. New, too, is Johnny Russo, bass player chock-a-block with rhythm.

It's a toss-up whether it's cooler to dine on deck or sit in the airy tap room out at Show Boat. But between dainty food, delicious drinks, soothing breezes—it's sure you'll forget about the weather.

It's a caution the way the townsfolk have been crowding to Griffith Farms Tavern. But the answer lies in the "plantation dinners" concocted by the capable O'Donnell chefs, those inviting tables on the lawn and the countryside breezes.

What prominent night club owner is going to blossom out as an entertainer in his own club this fall? We know, but no can tell. 'S provoking.

Roosevelt

spoke Monday in criticism of social security tax features, but it had been "decided" he would make no reply last night.

Tydings is due in Caroline County today and tomorrow will travel deep down the Eastern shore to make a speech at Salisbury.

The fluent Maryland Senator, outspoken in his opposition to some Administration measures, has never yet made a direct attack on the President, but yesterday's White House onslaught was expected to force a reply in kind.

The President's attempted "purge," frankly admitted in yesterday's public defense of primary "interference," may be extended at once in other States with new vigor.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had fixed no date for a return to South Carolina to aid Gov. Olin D. Johnston, now seeking to unseat the conservative Senator Smith, but expectations are he will make the trip. In a brief speech while passing through South Carolina he had kind words for Johnston but did not attack Smith personally.

Praised Lewis on Air.

The President first publicly showed his hand in the Maryland primaries Monday night when he warmly praised Tydings' opponent, Representative Lewis, as one of the four legislative "fathers" of the social security act. By an adroit radio maneuver, Lewis immediately cashed in on the tribute in a Statewide broadcast assailing Tydings.

But in his statement yesterday the President forthrightly declared it his "right and duty to tell the people what he thinks of Millard Tydings.

Charges Frankness Lacking.

"If men like Senator Tydings of Maryland said frankly: 'I no longer believe in the platform of the Democratic Party as expressed in the New Deal; I'm running for re-election as a member of the Republican opposition to the New Deal,' then there would be no reason and no excuse for President Roosevelt to intervene against them," said the President's editorial-statement.

"The issue would be clear. The voter could take his choice between the New Deal and Tydings' record of consistent opposition to it. But Tydings tells the voters he supports the 'bone and sinew' of the New Deal.

"That's why we welcome the report that Roosevelt help is going to be given to Tydings' opponent, Representative David J. Lewis, and to James H. Fay . . ."

Painters Back O'Connor.

Almost coincident with the President's denunciation of O'Connor, the painters' local union, No. 368, urged his renomination and reelection. Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent of the union, said O'Connor "has a perfect labor record." He wrote letters to 600 A. F. L. unions in O'Connor's district asking their support and announced plans to address the Manhattan Central Labor union next week in O'Connor's behalf.

"When the painters had difficulty at the Capitol several years ago, he was of great help to us," said Holcombe.

Brother With President.

O'Connor is a brother of Basil O'Connor, Mr. Roosevelt's former law partner.

Called "Doc" by the President, Basil O'Connor has been with Mr. Roosevelt almost constantly for more than a month. He was with the President on his July trip to California by train and accompanied him on the fishing cruise to the Galapagos islands.

Yesterday was the first press conference the President has held since their return.

President Leaves Today.

The President arranged to leave Washington shortly after 1 p. m. today for his scheduled visit to Canada and for tomorrow's dedication of the international bridge connecting Collins Landing, N. Y., and Ivy Lea, Canada. Asked if he intends to speak in Maryland for Lewis in the near future, Mr. Roosevelt said he had fixed no dates beyond Thursday.

The President said he thought he had received invitations to come to each of the 48 States, including Maine and Vermont. A reporter asked who invited him to Maine. Grinning broadly, the President said it was his mother.

Mr. Roosevelt's defense of his interference in State primaries dropped like a bombshell into an otherwise dull press conference.

Quotes "Tory Press."

The editorial the President adopted as his own was entitled: "Why the President 'Interferes'" and led off with the quoted sentence: "The President of the United States ought not to interfere in party primaries."

He said that statement in one form or another "is appearing these days throughout the Tory press."

"But actually," he said, "these primaries will determine to a large extent the make-up of the next Congress. And that, in turn, will determine whether or not the President can keep his campaign promises to the people. Campaign promises are supposed to be the responsibility of the whole party. At least that's the theory. But in practice the head of the party alone is held responsible."

Then followed his attack on the New Deal opponents in Democrat ranks who "after giving the New Deal lip service in 1936, turned around and knifed it in Congress in 1937 and 1938." As head of the party, he said he had a right to tell the people that.

A reporter asked if the President considered the court plan a campaign promise, inasmuch as it wasn't in the Democratic platform. The President conceded it was not in the platform but insisted it was no longer an issue, reiterating his previous statements that 98 per cent of its objectives already have been accomplished.

The newsman asked if votes against the court plan figured in the President's opposition to certain candidates. The President replied that they did not. But he said he was convinced that his saying that it did not would not prevent continued assertions that it did figure in his opposition.

Editorial Quoted by Roosevelt

Following is text of the New York Evening Post editorial which the President read at his press conference as his own statement yesterday in explanation of the part he is taking in Decomratic Party primary elections:

"The President of the United States ought not to interfere in party primaries." That statement, in one form or another, is appearing these days throughout the Tory press.

The idea is that the President should be aloof from such sordid considerations as who wins the primaries in his own party. But actually these primaries will determine to a large extent the makeup of the next Congress. And that, in turn, will determine whether or not the President can keep his campaign promises to the people.

Campaign promises are supposed to be the responsibility of the whole party. At least that's the theory. But in practice the head of the party alone is held responsible for them.

In American politics any one can attach himself to a political party whether he believes in its program or not. We hear the phrase "read out of the party," but it doesn't mean anything. No one is read out of the Democratic or Republican Party. There are many prominent Democrats today who are heart and soul against everything the Democratic Party has stood for since 1932. And those men are still in the party.

What's worse, not one of them was candid enough to oppose the renomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936, although after four years there was no doubt whatever as to the program Franklin D. Roosevelt was pursuing.

The same hidden opposition, after giving the New Deal lip-service in 1936, turned around and knifed it in Congress in 1937 and 1938.

Now that election time has come around again, the hidden opposition hides the ax behind its back and prepares to give the President lip-services once more.

In those circumstances, there is nothing for the President to do—as the responsible head of the New Deal—but to publicly repudiate those who have betrayed the New Deal in the past and will again.

If men like Senator Tydings, of Maryland, said frankly: 'I no longer believe in the platform of the Democratic Party as expressed in the New Deal; I'm running for re-election as a member of the Republican opposition to the New Deal," then there would be no reason and no excuse for President Roosevelt to intervene against them.

The issue would be clear. The voter could take his choice between the New Deal and Tydings' record of consistent opposition to it. But Tydings tells the voters he supports the "bone and sinew" of the New Deal. He wants to run with the Roosevelt prestige and the money of his conservative Republican friends both on his side.

In that case, it becomes the President's right and duty to tell the people what he thinks of Millard Tydings.

That's why we welcome the report that Roosevelt help is going to be given to Tydings' opponent, Representative David J. Lewis, and to James H. Fay, candidate for the nomination in the Sixteenth Congressional District of New York.

Fay is running against Representative John J. O'Connor, one of the most effective obstructionists in the lower house. Week in and week out, O'Connor labors to tear down New Deal strength, pickle New Deal legislation.

Why shouldn't the responsible head of the New Deal tell the people just that?

in what is primarily a local fight. One of the most recent cases where the President took a hand in a party primary was in Kentucky. As shown in institute surveys, which forecast the Kentucky primary result with an error of only 2 per cent points, the President's visit to the State to give Senator Barkley his blessing did not succeed in arresting the last-minute trend of sentiment toward Barkley's opponent, Gov. Chandler.

The full effect of the President's indorsement of Camp in Georgia remains to be seen. The primary is scheduled for September 14.

The institute's special survey in Georgia is unique in that it represents one of the few times in recent political history that the reaction of the general public in an event has been measured so quickly.

called for an organized safety movement among independent and smaller operators.

Companies and individuals who join the plan—a lasting, year-by-year effort to safeguard streets—will be provided with safety emblems and fitting recognition will be given for the best "no accident" record.

And as plans progressed to bring every District truck driver under a single safety banner, announcement was made yesterday that the Commissioners' new advisory committee on traffic will sponsor a rigid program of pedestrian control.

Cox Heads Committee.

At tomorrow's second meeting of the committee, headed by Brig. Gen. Albert C. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, a recommended change in the traffic code, requiring pedestrians to cross streets only at intersections and in accord with signal lights, will be made by a sub-committee assigned to study present methods of traffic law enforcement.

Conferring yesterday at the American Automobile Association, the sub-committee agreed to report the following proposals:

That the District of Columbia traffic regulations be amended to state more clearly the rights and duties of pedestrians on the streets and highways of the District and that proper penalties be prescribed for the violation of such regulations.

That special attention be given to the enforcement of regulations against motorists taking the right-of-way from pedestrians crossing streets in the prescribed legal manner—on proper signals and at crosswalks.

To Limit Parking.

That particular attention be devoted to establishment of one-way streets and limiting of parking on one side of the streets in residential areas where such steps will expedite traffic with a greater degree of safety.

Stressing the importance of requiring both motorists and pedestrians to respect the rights and privileges of each other, Russell Singer, general manager of the AAA, called for a degree of courtesy and co-operation in the fight to lessen traffic fatalities.

"It is now recognized," said Singer, "that motor deaths are largely confined to outlying areas and are due to negligence on the part of motorists and pedestrians. Enforcement of the right-of-way as prescribed in clear-cut regulations will do much to reduce accidents and deaths.

"The new citizens committee, backed by the Commissioners, police and traffic officials, offers renewed hope for joint community action."

Pedestrians Cited.

In recommending that pedestrians be forced to obey the law as well as motorists, the sub-committee cited figures showing that an overwhelming percentage of all fatalities are caused by careless walking.

Recommendations for a program of traffic education and safety promotion, together with proposals to solve problems affecting District playgrounds, will also be presented to the full advisory commitee tomorrow.

The Post and Junior Board of Commerce will provide windshield stickers and window placards informing the public of a company's participation in the continuing safety program.

Rules Listed.

On the reverse side of windshield stickers, as a constant reminder to the driver, will be the following set of rules:

1. Watch out for children.
2. Signal your intentions to stop or turn.
3. Remain in your proper traffic lane—don't weave.
4. Pull into the curb when making deliveries.
5. Obey all traffic regulations.

Indicative of current efforts to reduce accidents was yesterday's record of only two injuries on Washington streets.

Joseph Hall, 39, colored, of 57 Pierce street northwest, was the day's most seriously injured victim. His pelvis and both wrists were broken when he was struck in the 3900 block of Nichols avenue southeast. He is in Casualty Hospital.

A truck struck and injured Esther Zisman, 29, of 1435 Spring road northwest, at Twelfth and C streets southwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital with slight cuts and bruises.

Caroline to Bar Sunday Beer Sale

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 16 (AP).—The board of supervisors of Caroline County voted at a special meeting yesterday to ban the Sunday sale of beer and wine in the county beginning September 15.

The ruling does not affect the town of Bowling Green. The Bowling Green council, however, will consider the ban there at a meeting this week, it was said today.

Girl Wins $75,000 In Sweeps; to Wed Seller of Ticket

Miss Lucille Barry, stenographer at the United States Chamber of Commerce, who with her mother, Mrs. E. A. Barry, of 4223 Third street northwest, won $75,000 in Irish sweepstakes last spring, will be married here this September to Carleton Walsh, an accountant at the chamber.

MISS BARRY.

Mr. Walsh sold Miss Barry and her mother the ticket on Royal Darniell, second in the Grand National.

Lewis-Jackson Link Dropped, Tydings Claims

Baltimore, Aug. 16.—Senator Millard E. Tydings prefaced a campaign trip into western Maryland today with an assertion he was entirely satisfied with the "attitude" of Maryland's gubernatorial candidates toward his re-election.

Tydings, involved in a bitter fight with Representative David J. Lewis for the Senatorial seat he has occupied for 12 years, made plain he believed that reported negotiations for an alliance between Lewis forces and the gubernatorial camp of Mayor Howard W. Jackson had been dropped.

Asked if there was any significance in his appearance with Jackson and members of Jackson's slate at a Hagerstown rally last night, the Senator replied:

"Last May, I declared myself neutral in the gubernatorial campaign. My position is unchanged."

As to the Jackson-Lewis merger, reported pending in late weeks, he said:

"I am satisfied that the gubernatorial candidates are also neutral. I am perfectly satisfied with the relations that exist with all four candidates for Governor and with their attitude toward me."

Representative Lewis, who last night drew a pat from President Roosevelt for his co-authorship of the social security bill, spent the day in Washington, coming here tonight to address an outdoor mass meeting of the Federation of Independent Voters of the city's Fourth District.

Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, active foe of Mayor Jackson in the Democratic gubernatorial contest, took to his campaign airplane again, flying to a Washington County political picnic and from there to Cumberland.

The picnic was sponsored by supporters of Mayor Jackson who was the guest of honor. Tomorrow, the Mayor will share the spotlight at the Cumberland fair with Gov. Harry W. Nice.

O'Conor bid for western Maryland's labor vote at Cumberland with a pledge to "utilize every weapon at my disposal to fight unemployment and to improve the conditions of the working men and women."

The Democratic gubernatorial candidate, in an address prepared for a broadcast here, asserted the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor indorsed his record and "gave me a clean bill of health" while "significantly omitting" any endorsement of Mayor Howard W. Jackson, O'Conor's Baltimore foe in the gubernatorial race.

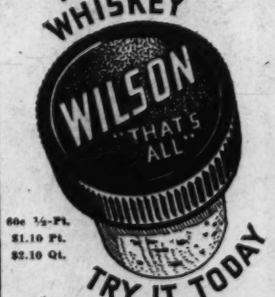

If elected, the attorney general said, "I shall do everything in my power to promote harmony, goodwill and mutual consideration between labor and business."

Throng Attends Exhibits, Races at Cumberland Fair

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16 (AP).—Farmers and racing enthusiasts disregarded the weather—one of the hottest days of the year—to flock today to the Cumberland Fair.

For those to whom horse racing was a bore, there was cattle and sheep of which there was the largest entry since the first fair, General Manager Harry A. Manley said.

Dump Yields 14th Butcher Victim in Ohio

possibly butcher—a fine surgical technique and a mastery of anatomy.

All the heads had been severed between the third and fourth cervical vertebrae. Some of the heads never were found. Police believed most of the victims were transients or derelicts, because the majority were not identified.

It was the mutilations that convinced the officers that all were the work of one man. Members and organs were removed. In some cases they were found near the torsos, in other cases they never appeared. When most of a body was found it nevertheless had been subjected to mutilations which could only have been by a sex-crazed brain, yet . . . carried out with perfect technique.

Thousands Grilled.

While detectives questioned suspects by the thousands in a futile effort and mapped the city with a red cross to mark the scene of each grewsome discovery, the mad killer struck again and again.

His toll:

No. 5—A man, about 25, found in Kingsbury Run, bearing name "Jiggs" tatooed on his arm and wrapped in clothes bearing the initials J. D. and W. C. G., June 5, 1936. His head was buried nearby.

No. 6—Nude man, about 40, found by a girl in Big Creek, July 22, 1936.

No. 7—Nude man, about 30, in Kingsbury Run, September 10, 1936.

No. 8—A woman found September 14, 1936.

No. 9—A young mother, about 20, found on the shore of Lake Erie, February 23, 1937.

No. 10—Mrs. Rose Wallace, 40, colored, skeleton found in a burlap bag under a Cuyahoga River bridge, June 6, 1937, identified through dental work.

No. 11—A stocky man, about 35, recovered from Cuyahoga River, July 6, 1937.

No. 12—A woman, 25 to 30 years old, her leg found in the Cuyahoga River, April 8, 1938, and the rest of the body on May 2, 1938.

No. 13 and 14.—Two women found today near the site of last year's Great Lakes Exposition.

The mad killer's known toll tonight, was 14, eight women and six men, of whom only the three were identified. How many others he may have killed and concealed successfully can only be guessed.

Rep. Kennedy Condemns Junkets to Mexico.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, declining an invitation to accompany a Congressional party to Mexico City this fall, said yesterday he considered it "highly improper for any member of Congress to accept the hospitality of the Mexican government or any of its officials" until the controversy over seizure of American oil properties had been settled.

The invitation was extended by Representative Poage (Democrat), of Texas, who said he was arranging the trip at behest of a group of Mexican Senators.

Kennedy declared the "impudent" reply of the Mexican government to American protests over seizure of oil lands "should make it impossible for any member of the Senate or House of Representatives to be a guest of Mexico."

A Success.

The very laws of probability, it might seem, had to be set aside to provide such wretched weather as has dogged the Sunset Symphonies at the Watergate throughout the whole six weeks of the season. Of the eleven concerts given up to now there were only two at which the audiences, such as they were, did not risk a drenching. Two concerts were actually played in a downpour. In four instances postponements were necessary. This spitefulness of the elements inevitably cut deeply into the total attendance figures and added greatly to the financial burden that the sponsors must bear.

But in spite of all that the Sunset Symphonies this summer were a success. And notwithstanding the financial hardship, those who made the concerts possible have every reason to be gratified. On each of the two nights of favorable weather the audiences far exceeded the most optimistic forecasts. Even more impressive than the size of the audiences, however, was the astonishing proportion among them of young men and women, youths and girls, and the complete attention which these groups gave to the music. The concerts demonstrated as plainly as anything could that the jam session and the hi-de-ho have a formidable rival.

Also significant was the popular vote whereby the Caesar Frank Symphony in D Minor was selected for the place of honor on the program of the final concert of the season tonight. That this work should have been chosen over the lush and melodious Unfinished Symphony of Franz Schubert is an interesting evidence of the increasing sophistication among Washington audiences.

In all of these factors there should certainly be enough encouragement to insure a resumption of the Sunset Symphonies next summer, and even perhaps to justify a concurrent experiment in outdoor grand opera, such as was recently suggested by Dr. Hans Kindler.

Worse Than Heat.

High above the chorus of voices complaining about the weather rises one which for sheer misery commands attention. It comes from a young meteorologist stationed in Cuba.

For the past two summers he has been commissioned by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to study hurricanes. In this undertaking, of course, the first requisite is to catch your hurricane. To date the young expert has been disappointed. Hurricanes have blown everywhere about him, mostly at sea, although occasionally on shore, such as that which swept through a strip of Louisiana on Sunday. But they avoid Cuba. The student of hurricanes fears that unless he finds one soon his subsidy will be withdrawn. So he makes supplication nightly to the wind god of the Caribbean Indians known phonetically as "Hurrican."

Dragging about in 100-degree temperatures, Washingtonians may be tempted to pray along with him for something like a hurricane to cool them off. If so, they may well think twice. San Felipe, the big hurricane that hit Puerto Rico, was a 12-hour blow. It blew so hard that ordinary houses literally exploded because of the vacuum created by the rushing winds. Virtually every bird on the island was blown to Kingdom Come. The wind twisted tough 60-foot cocoanut palms permanently out of shape. And many creatures that survived the flailing debris were caught by the floods resulting from the pelting rain which accompanied the gale.

No, a fan, a cool drink and an easy conscience are probably as much as Washington wants or needs to swelter through until the refreshing light breezes of fall begin to blow.

What Price Art?

Out in St. Louis there is great indignation over the purchase by the City Art Museum, a tax supported institution, of a 15-inch Egyptian bronze figurine of a tomcat, dating from 600 B. C. or thereabouts. The price paid for the cat was $14,000, which, it is being pointed out, would have bought a powerful lot of beefsteak and milk for hungry children of whom St. Louis has its share. The newspaper editions which announced the purchase of the cat also reported the eviction of a widow and seven children who had been unable to meet their rent. This gave somebody an opportunity to calculate that $14,000 would have paid the rent up to the year A. D. 2018.

Art, says the proverb, is long, whereas life is short. But it is possible to carry that viewpoint to extremes. People who live at the brink of hunger and distress can scarcely be expected to develop an artistic craving for bronze cats, even when they are 25 centuries old. At best it will be a great many years before St. Louis taxpayers receive $14,000 worth of esthetic gratification out of their cat. In these circumstances the solemn assurance of the museum's board of control that this is no ordinary bronze cat by any means, but "an enduring symbol of the goddess, Ubastet," is likely to add fuel to the controversy.

Mr. Hull Warns The Aggressors.

In his radio speech last night, Secretary Hull went over old and familiar ground. There was little in this address that he had not touched upon in his famous National Press Club talk of March 17, in his Nashville address three months later and in other speeches and statements. But coming at this particular juncture in world affairs Mr. Hull's remarks have a special importance.

The past few months have seen no easing of international tensions. The war goes on in Asia. The skies of Europe are again dark with ominous clouds; nerves are on edge; what appears to be a veritable epidemic of fear is sweeping the Old World.

This time, as heretofore, the crisis may pass and Europe may be vouchsafed still another breathing spell. But as long as the underlying situation remains unsettled the threat of disaster will continue to hang over the world like a sword of Damocles. For while, as Mr. Hull points out, it is unlikely that a "condition of wholesale chaos will develop overnight," it cannot be ignored that "the present trend is in that direction and the longer this drift continues the greater becomes the danger that the whole world may be sucked into a maelstrom of unregulated and savage economic, political and military competition and conflict."

Can the United States afford to stand by and ignore this development? Can we afford to take the ostrich-like attitude that what goes on abroad does not concern us? To ask these questions today is to answer them. It is obvious that, to quote Mr. Hull, "our own situation is profoundly affected by what happens elsewhere in the world."

The Secretary goes on to say:

When destruction, impoverishment and starvation afflict other areas, we cannot, no matter how hard we may try, escape impairment of our own economic well-being. When freedom is destroyed over increasing areas elsewhere, our ideals of individual liberty, our most cherished political and social institutions are jeopardized.

When the dignity of the human soul is denied in great parts of the world, and when that denial is made a slogan under which propaganda is set in motion and armies take the field, no one of us can be sure that his country or even his home is safe.

The United States, said Abraham Lincoln, cannot remain half slave and half free. By the same token the world cannot remain half lawless and half law-abiding. Either law will rule the affairs of nations or chaos will be their common lot. The time approaches, says the Secretary of State, when, "one or the other of these alternatives must prevail," and no nation, certainly not one as powerful as the United States, "can avoid participation in determining which course will be taken."

In his speech last night, Mr. Hull made it clear on which side the United States is prepared to throw its great weight. This nation is on the side of international law and treaty observance and against lawlessness and aggression. It wholeheartedly favors the settlement of differences through processes of peaceful negotiation and with equal vigor deplores the use of force as an instrument of policy. It believes in international co-operation and is profoundly disturbed by the threat of international anarchy.

Mr. Hull's speech, therefore, may be regarded as a promise of co-operation with those nations which favor the maintenance of decent standards in international life. By the same token, it is a clear and unmistakable warning to aggressor powers that they should not reckon on supine acquiescence by the United States in their cynical disregard of international rules of conduct built up so painfully in the course of the centuries.

Those nations which, in Mr. Hull's words, "profess to place their reliance solely on a policy of armed force," cannot lightly ignore the far-reaching implications of the stand thus taken.

The Only Cloud.

More than any other cause, unsettled boundaries have been responsible for the wars that have plagued this hemisphere. It is, therefore, very encouraging to note that during recent days one border dispute after another has proved susceptible to peaceful negotiation.

In this category are the dispute between Peru and Colombia over Leticia, the Honduran-Nicaraguan controversy and, most recently, the successful adjustment through the mediation of six American republics, including the United States, of the Bolivian-Paraguayan row over the Gran Chaco. Now a report from San Jose, Costa Rica, tells of an impending settlement of the boundary differences between that country and Panama, a dispute which goes back to colonial times and which, in 1921, led to undeclared hostilities.

This is a further indication of the growing influence of the Pan American spirit of peace and friendship. Indeed, about the only large cloud on the American horizon at the present time is the unsettled dispute between the United States and Mexico over the expropriation by the latter nation of American properties for which no payment has so far been made.

In this matter the "good neighbor" policy pursued by the United States is clearly not being reciprocated. Mexico is acting in a manner which can hardly foster Mexican-American friendship, and the growing economic and financial crisis within the southern republic indicates that the high-handed action of the Cardenas government is paying no domestic dividends either.

The increasing number of boundary settlements in the Americas reflects an admirable spirit of give and take that now generally prevails among the republics of this hemisphere. That same spirit is exemplified in the patient attitude displayed by the United States in dealing with Mexico's campaign of expropriation. It is clearly up to Mexico to adopt a similar policy.

The Purge Continues.

President Roosevelt has spoiled the effect of his Monday night address by yesterday's blast against Senator Tydings and Representative O'Connor of New York. His speech on social security, one purpose of which was undoubtedly to aid Congressman David J. Lewis in his fight for the Senatorial nomination in Maryland, stood out in sharp contrast to his attack upon Senator George at Barnesville. It raised momentary hope that the purge movement had collapsed. But those hopes proved to be unfounded.

For an understanding of the issue which the President's interference in the State primaries has raised it is important to note the contrast between his recent speeches. The Washington address was directed to a national issue. It was delivered in connection with a program commemorating the third anniversary of the social security act. Such reports on past achievements and statements of future policy are always highly desirable. Neither voter nor candidate could reasonably resent the discussion of national issues by the President in Washington during primary campaigns.

It was logical, too, for the President to "thank" Congressman Lewis as one of the legislators who "fathered" the social security measure in Congress. Mr. Lewis was only one of five public servants singled out for special commendation in the enactment of this law. One other was the conservative Senator Harrison who has often disagreed with Mr. Roosevelt. In these circumstances the President could not have failed to mention the Maryland Representative without doing him an injustice.

In that speech, moreover, the President did not ask voters to cast their ballots for Mr. Lewis. The Congressman himself was quick to make political capital out of the compliment he had received. But that is a different matter. It is only when the President himself uses the prestige of his great office to lay down the gauge of battle to a representative of the people that the grave issue of encroachment upon our Federal system of government is raised.

By denouncing Senator Tydings and Representative O'Connor the President has once more assumed that he is more capable of choosing candidates of the Democratic Party in the States than the people whom those candidates will represent. That is an indefensible position. The popular resentment which such an attitude arouses is effectively shown by the survey of the American Institute of Public Opinion, which indicates that 75 per cent of the voters in Georgia think the President should not have made his Barnesville speech.

The President now contends that he is merely exposing candidates who have repudiated campaign promises of the Democratic Party. It is doubtful whether any candidate has repudiated more of the campaign pledges of 1932 and 1936 than the President himself. The foremost issue between the President and the "yes, but" men was the proposed enlargement of the Supreme Court. That measure advanced by the President was certainly in violation of the 1936 Democratic platform as many leading Democratic legislators understand that document. White House talk of repudiated pledges may easily prove to be a boomerang.

Fortunately the contest in Maryland is not likely to be decided on the basis of the President's interference. Early in the campaign Congressman Lewis indicated that he would not welcome any meddling from the outside. The Free Staters are thoroughly competent to decide the issue between Mr. Tydings and Mr. Lewis for themselves, and they will probably do so in spite of the President's indiscretion.

A philosopher says there's nothing like adversity to make a man think. Perhaps so. Come to think of it, when Rodin's "Thinker" went into such heavy conference with himself, he had run out of clothes and had nothing to sit on but a stump.

There's always somebody ready to rush out and meet trouble more than halfway. The other day a Chicagoan played 144 holes of golf in 15 hours to win a farm.

Aside to the voter: A candidate with a good platform of his own to stand on isn't always jumping on the other fellow's.

There are a lot of foolish men in this here world. The other day one of them married a woman who can throw a discus 143 feet.

"It is highly inadvisable to talk 'baby talk' to a baby," declares a psychologist. Yes—especially if she is around 18.

"Toggle-Jointed" Schools.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The criticism of Washington junior high schools in The Post is very appropos, but why limit it to the junior high schools? The graduates of the senior high schools cannot add, subtract, multiply or divide. They cannot spell. They cannot punctuate or analyze simple sentences. They don't know the difference among simple, complex and compound sentences. To them the words "parse," "decline," "conjugate," "analyze" mean nothing. They do not know the names of a dozen States of the Union with their capitals.

Probably the worst botch of all the botches in the public school curriculum is the subject called "English," which is simply a trash box into which are dumped hundreds of books for the pupils to read in their "home work," which is a racket designed to keep the pupils out of the school room, to keep them from annoying the teachers. High school pupils are required to read as high as 18 of these books, none of them less than 200 pages, in a semester, which is 18 times as many as they ought to read. Most of the books on the reading list will give the pupil nothing if he does read them, and many of them are not worth anybody's reading at any time. Anyone who has had any experience as a school teacher 35 years ago could take an old Harvey's or Reed & Kellogg's grammar and teach pupils more about English in four months than they learn in their whole school life in the Washington public schools. As a matter of fact they learn nothing about English. I don't believe there is a Washington high school graduate, in recent years at least, who during his school life ever heard of "Sennacherib," "Casabianca" or "Thanatopsis," gems of English literature, favorites of "Friday afternoon" in the village school 35 years ago.

The decline in the quid pro quo furnished the taxpayers by the schools, not only in Washington but throughout the country, is due principally to the activities of a band of clever politicians who are in control of the school hierarchy, and who have adopted a definite program of action to "elevate" the profession, a program based on the fundamental premise that the public should pay more for education and receive less. Following out that program they have undertaken the elimination of spelling drill, arithmetic drill, penmanship drill—everything that means any work in the school room.

They inaugurated the policy of loading up the school pay roll with a swarm of useless toggle joints, supervisors, inspectors, "assistants" of one kind and another, who get big salaries and do no work of any value to the schools. They have secured the passage of laws in nearly all the States requiring persons who wish to teach school to attend a normal school for four years, which greatly pleased the oldsters already in the profession because it acted as a barricade to keep out the youngsters, to restrict competition. It had the effect of reducing the supply and increasing the price to the consumer, which in Washington is now $122 per year per pupil, fully twice what it ought to be. As a matter of fact, there is nothing so complicated about teaching school that any high school graduate can't learn anything that he needs to know about it in three weeks attendance at a teachers' institute.

Years ago we often heard of that famous challenge of Horace Mann: "Give us the money to educate the people and we will empty the jails." Since the jail requirements are keeping pace pretty well with the school requirements we don't hear anything of that rash promise in later years.

There are four steps that might be taken that would greatly increase the efficiency and reduce the cost of the public schools:

1. Repeal the law requiring prospective school teachers to attend a normal school.

2. Issue a teachers' certificate to anyone who passes a written examination prescribed by the school board.

3. Dispense with the swarm of useless toggle joints in the school system, supervisors, inspectors, assistants, whose only function, aside from signing the pay roll, is to harass and bedevil the teachers, and make every principal of a school responsible direct to the superintendent of schools.

4. Appoint persons to the school board who are interested in seeing a good job done for the children, rather than furnishing good jobs for those on the pay roll. The public can't expect much from a member of the school board whose sole qualification is that he thinks he looks like the superintendent.

"True to Fact."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You and your newspaper are to be complimented for venturing to publish such a true-to-fact article written by Mr. Westbrook Pegler entitled "News-Men and G-Men." An article of its kind is not found very often in a newspaper because such so-called important men as are referred to in the article usually collaborate with the press. As a result nothing but the commendable work of these individuals is made public. If more such articles were published the public would very soon be awakened to the fact that these "important men" are two faced.

By beating around the bush, other writers have tried to give the same impression but have failed. When no words whatsoever are minced in such articles, we can be certain the facts have been verified.

"My Friend."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Saint Peter sat at the Pearly Gates,
Taking up tickets that showed folks' fates.
As the stream of travelers flowed along,
A Pilgrim dropped out of the motley throng.
"My frand," said he, with a flashing smile,
"Before I go in, I would chat a while.
"True, you haven't a fireside, or even a mike,
"But chatting is one of the things I like."
So he chatted, discoursing of sheep and goats,
And production quotas on youth's wild oats,
While an endless procession of rich and poor
Showed their tickets and entered the good Saint's door.
Then a stranger asked, with a Southern drawl,
"Ah wonder if Ah couldn' jine you-all?"
Like a flash, the Pilgrim was on his feet:
"We'll have to keep this man travelin', Pete!
"A scholar and gentleman, I agree,
But he can't sit in Heaven along with Me.
"When I was in office, I'd have you know
He denied me thrice, so he goes below."
O'er the Saint's face passed a shadow of pain,
As a cock in the distance crowed amain.
"I've done some denying, myself," said he,
"But my sins have all been forgiven me,
"And I count the votes at the Journey's End.
"God bless you, Walter. Come in, MY FRIEND."

"Healthy Battles."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of the discussion in your letter columns of Pharmacists vs. Physicians—why is it ethical for certain "high grade" drug stores of the non-10-cent store variety to give doctors a "rake-off" on their prescriptions? Is this why doctors will give a "prescription" for a ready-prepared remedy?

I used to get a certain good prescription filled and always had to wait 30 minutes for it. Later, through a friend in the drug business I learned I could get it already put up at one-fifth the cost and not have to wait for it, either.

Two things are making it hard for doctors: The profession is beginning to get crowded; and various types of mental healing are making inroads on their patronage. Yet I consider the calling of a doctor higher than that of a minister. In the truest sense the two jobs can scarcely be separated. Let's fight out this thing between the doctors and the laity. It's a "healthy" battle and the widely-read Post may be doing more good than it realizes by giving us the space. Let's hear from more doctors, too—doctors with a vision. Like most of this old world's problems, the trouble seems largely economic. But there must be some way to support the necessary number of good doctors without the greatest of all blessings, public health, becoming in many cases a kind of "ransom price." Or is this just old friend Evolution's way of teaching us we better wake up and not get sick in the first place?

Puerto Rican Psychosis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Frenzied Puerto Ricans," published July 26, was one of the finest and most accurate pieces of editorial writing that has come our way in a long time. You express surprise and wonder that there should be Puerto Ricans so misguided and deaf to logic and fact as to employ violence in advocating independence. We who live here have been trying to find an explanation that might give the terrorists the benefit of the doubt.

The closest we seem to be able to come is to attribute the attempted assassination of Gov. Winship to a psychopathic condition affecting perhaps 200 members of the radically inclined Nationalist Party. It seems to me that these young firebrands actually have nothing against Gov. Blanton Winship. He has been extremely conservative in extending every constitutional right to this group and I believe that fact is generally admitted by the more stable members of the party.

The Nationalists have developed a phobia—Yankee-hating. They have told themselves stories, believe them and then engage in dime novel plotting with the acknowledged understanding that the plotters are to martyrise themselves. As avowed and venomous Yankee haters, they look upon the Governor as the No. 1 Yankee and sit up nights attempting to find ways of making life unbearable for the symbol of their hatred.

To get to understand how things of this sort can happen, you have to have a working knowledge of psychology, plus a lot of experience in handling the volatile Latin American. The stable majority in Puerto Rico reacts normally. We may be a trifle more temperamental than the continental, but our reactions are human; we are controlled by logic; we realize the benefits of association within the United States and are anxious to find a way of getting the safety valve of Nationalism tied down. We understand one another prettty well, but I confess it is almost as hard for me to figure this attempted assassination out as it is for your Washington readers.

The Primrose Path.

EVER since good Master Will Shakespeare wrote of "The primrose path of dalliance" mankind has looked upon this lovely flower of English cottage gardens as a symbol of the pleasures of life.

It was in that mood that I planted some primrose plants in my tiny garden this spring. In due time dainty, faint-hued blossoms appeared, justifying the Bard's designation of the flower as "pale primrose."

The spring galloped on, the blossoms, after a time, fell to the earth yet the plants continued to grow.

I was in my little garden some weeks ago and noticed that the primrose plants had begun to have an unattractive appearance. "I can plant fresh ones next spring," I thought to myself. Leaning over I pulled up the primrose plants, one by one.

Alas, no one had ever told me and I had never dreamed, that I was one of the persons who should keep at a respectful distance from primroses. I am "allergic," as the doctors call it, to the poison concealed in the handsome primrose for certain sons and daughters of men.

As a child, and to the present time, I had wandered unscathed at will among poison ivy, poison oak and the 100 or more varieties of plants which poison many. In fact, I had answered gayly when friends warned me of the presence of poison ivy, etc., etc., "Oh, I am immune!" And so I am, save when it comes to Shakespeare's primroses.

On the back of my left hand—and I am left-handed—appeared three small postules within 30 minutes after pulling up the primroses. I noticed them—painted them around with an antiseptic and forgot them for the rest of the day.

The entire back of my left hand was affected by the next morning. Urged by an alarmed family, I hastened to the doctor. He looked much more serious about it than I had anticipated he would. In a not too confident tone he expressed the hope that he could check the primrose poisoning from spreading to other parts.

I left his office with much more respectful fear of primrose poisoning than I had had when I entered it.

Enter now the Job's comforters. I had been ignorant of the very existence of such a malady as "primrose poisoning" before I had fallen afoul of those particular plants. Yet, within a day or two I found myself with a collection of facts and traditions. Everyone I met seemed to have heard of some one or other who had experienced its trials and could contribute tidbits of lore on the subject.

"My aunt had primrose poisoning. It spread all over her body and she was in Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore flat on her back for two months" . . . "There is a florist in Washington whose three sons never may approach a primrose plant" . . . "I have a friend who cannot even look at a primrose plant without being poisoned." The primrose became Public Enemy No. 1 in the category of vegetable poisoners.

Fortunately, I had a good doctor, and he confined the poisoning to the back of my left hand. Soon I will be cured and never again the primrose path for me!

In the course of my primrose investigations, I came across evidence of a poetic dispute, never quite settled, it seems, on the actual color of primrose flowers. Spenser in his "Shepherd's Calendar" wrote of primroses as "greene" and Wordsworth, in his famous triolet anent the limitations of one Peter Bell, fastens the hue of yellow upon them. For he wrote:

"A primrose by a river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."

Obviously, Peter was not allergic. However, in the matter of the yellow primrose Wordsworth is supported by William Allingham in his "Wishing," where he wrote:

"Ring-ting! I wish I were a primrose,
A bright yellow primrose, blowing in the spring!"

Eleanor Sinclair Rohde, the noted British authority, dealing with the same subject, declares: "Seen in the mass there is a pale yet dominant, greenish tone in the luminous color of the flowers, and indisputably the ethereal loveliness of this color, which is in perfect harmony with the exquisite, fresh, pure scent of the flowers, cannot be described as yellow."

Perhaps the best way to end the dispute is to call the color simply "primrose" or to use the word "pale" used of it by both Shakespeare and Milton.

Fair Enough

MAYBE I SHOULDN'T take two bites of a sad oyster but I am afraid that in yesterday's living, human document I didn't touch up all the points raised by Senator Sherman Minton, who holds a legal license to lie and slander with impunity on the floor of the United States Senate and in the columns of the Congressional Record. For those who might incline to regard this is an overestimate of the Senator's privilege, I call attention to the parliamentary immunity enjoyed by all members of both Houses of Congress. This is a legal protection against the just consequences of vicious and irresponsible defamation and the willful misrepresentation of the known truth. It is a blackjack placed in the hands of anyone who comes to the halls of Capitol Hill through the byways of county and State politics.

It is also a means of blackmail, for a Senator may use his immunity to persecute any individual or any interest having the ill judgment or civic fortitude to refuse financial tribute to the Senator's political boss back home, or to oppose any proposal, however foul, advanced by any Senator, however low. Conferred originally in the interests of freedom of debate on the wistful assumption that patriot-statesmen would not debase it, the immunity has been used as the shield of the liar and the refuge of the coward. And the Congressional Record has potentialities already well explored, far beyond the audacity of the most brazen blackmailer of the lay press.

* * * *

SENATOR MINTON, regularly licensed to lie and slander, has been attacking the veracity of the press in pursuit of his proposal to muzzle the papers in retaliation for their opposition to the reorganization bill. This bill was defeated by a vote of his colleagues by democratic process, and not by the press, so the Senator's wrath would seem to have chosen the wrong victim. His proposal was what legislators and lobbyists call a strike bill. A strike bill is a bill offered in the guise of sincerity to harm a person or interest against whom the author holds a feud. Senator Minton's insincerity was admitted when he concealed that he had offered his censorship proposal merely for moral effect. It was, in general effect, a warning that the American press, in opposing New Deal measures under debate in Congress, exposed itself to a risk of censorship by the New Deal.

He made the proposition that the free press privilege implies an obligation to avoid willful untruth. I will take him up on that with the proviso that the right of free speech lays a similar obligation on Senators as well as minor campaign orators and the clergy.

"I didn't want to muzzle the press," Senator Minton said in a speech last Saturday. "I just wanted to muzzle the liars who knew they were lying."

* * * *

IT IS SOMETIMES hard to recognize a lie and to prove willfulness, but, up to a certain point, lying and slander are punishable even now, except in the exclusive, privileged company which Senator Minton adorns with his learning and his conscience. The publisher may be sued or prosecuted for libel. And, theoretically, the political windjammer on the stump and the rogue preacher, spattering sweat and venom from his pulpit, as happened in 1936, may be held legally accountable for slanderous remarks.

Yet, if Mr. Minton's proposal were extended to speech, he would stifle controversy outside the legislative halls and forbid the propagation of religious faith by the preaching of divine, but not legally provable mysteries. Some authority would have to decide which party to a political debate was wrong and therefore guilty of untruth. And no Fundamentalist would be safe in the open propagation of his belief.

Judging by his citations, Mr. Minton leans to the radical press and to radical critics of the conventional press as authorities on truth. In that he seems to disqualify himself as a judge of veracity, for his radical friends are second only to the licensed liars of the legislative halls in their abhorrence of truth and in the malice and wantonness of their slanders. But they are a poor second, for nobody else can be expected to lie and slander with the total abandon of a group who reserve legal right to abandon fact and the merest seeming of decency in the furtherance of their cheap and miserable political ambitions.

In approximately the words of Senator Minton, I don't want to muzzle the United States Senate, I just want to muzzle the liars who know they are lying.

If War Comes In Europe

Will It Be Long Or Short?

"Notwithstanding the strategic advantages enjoyed by the totalitarian states, the only kind of war which they can hope to win is a lightning-like, short one . . . There is every reason to believe the Germans and the Italians would combine air raids on Paris and London with operations in the Mediterranean and North Africa."

What Of The Battleground?

"I do not share the belief that Germany will first try to paralyze Czechoslovakia, for I believe such an attempt would result in a long drawn war that would be fatal to Germany . . . It is my opinion that, supported by Italy, she would first attempt to destroy her arch enemy, France, for 'delenda Gallia' is the theme to which Hitler constantly recurs in 'Mein Kampf.' With France out of the way Germany would have complete freedom of action in Central Europe and could yield the Mediterranean basin to her Italian ally."

If The First Assault Should Fail?

"The key to their (the anti-Fascist powers') defense, stragetically speaking, is Czechoslovakia. . . . Simultaneous attacks launched from French and Czechoslovakian airdromes, shuttling back and forth, can reach and paralyze all the German industrial centers. Since Germany would find all the sea lanes closed by the British navy and could no longer import war materials, she would soon be checkmated . . . The democratic countries cannot lose a long war—provided Czechoslovakia remains intact and blocks Germany's access to the oil of Rumania and the granaries of eastern Europe."

(The opinions quoted above are those of Pierre Cot, former French minister of aviation, as published in the Pariser Tageszeitung (organ of German Emigres). They are reprinted here from the translation in Living Age.)

Rain-Check War

Der Tag Was All Scheduled For May 25, Then Postponed When Czech Mobilization Crossed Hitler's Plans, Bouton Says.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ONE OF AMERICA'S most prominent columnists and radio speakers returned recently from a visit in Europe and announced that war would begin on August 15. That prediction, it now appears, was not altogether accurate. Other observers, less specific as to dates, have predicted war within a few days. They may be right. That a definite date was once set for an assault on Czechoslovakia was disclosed by information reaching me eight days ago.

In the middle of last March Hitler ordered that all mobilizable military forces of the Third Reich must complete all preparations for action by May 25. When the Czech mobilization crossed his plans on May 21, he ordered an immediate report from all sources as to whether they could be ready immediately. Only the SS (Black Shirts) reported themselves ready to move at once. All other reports asked for two to five days additional for preparation, and Bernard Koehler, personal friend of Hitler's, flew to London to inform himself as to the attitude of the British government. Hitler's Adjutant Simon went to Italy to find out Mussolini's attitude.

Koehler's informants told him that Britain would probably break off diplomatic relations, but not take any military action at the beginning. The news from Rome was less encouraging. Neither from a military nor a psychological standpoint could Italy intervene in the absence of direct Italian interests. Mussolini promised military help in case France or Britain or both should be involved. But direct questions by the German General Staff to the Italian head army command brought such a reply that, according to my report, "Gen. Brauchitsch declared that he could base no military decisions upon it, unless the states on the eastern border (Poland and Rumania) would either make it impossible for Russia to take any action or would oppose Russia on Germany's side."

Those states, however, gave no satisfactory answer to Berlin's soundings as to their attitude, and Poland asked what protection she could expect from a Russian attack from the rear if she abandoned her neutrality. Hitler's plan to impress the British Ambassador with a picture of the formidable German armaments and especially ability to carry on a war with gas was shattered when the Ambassador ordered a special train to be kept ready to remove British subjects from Germany.

On the evening of May 24 Hitler finally ordered all action postponed—not abandoned—until further notice. After a number of sessions of the cabinet and commanding generals, Hitler ordered that all preparations for immediate mobilization must be ended by July 15. By that date the German diplomats must have created "a diplomatic situation as favorable as possible for a German initiative, and must create a tension in Spain full of explosive stuff and automatically engaging Italy."

Vigorous Action By Czechs Averts War.

A GENERAL STRIKE involving the whole Sudeten German districts in Czechoslovakia was to be staged on Saturday, July 16. Riots were to be provoked, with conflicts which could be used as a justification for an invasion by Germany to restore order. A cloaked concentration of troops along the Czech border was finished on July 14, including much heavy artillery on the Austrian Czech border. Officers in civilian clothing were to enter Czechoslovakia to help provoke disorders as soon as the Henlein followers had proclaimed a general strike.

The Czechoslovak government, fully aware of what was going on, moved promptly. The Sudeten German industrialists were informed that they would be imprisoned immediately in case of a strike, and preparations were made to put down the expected trouble at the outset. Two days later Berlin ordered the Henleinites to postpone their outbreaks. It was on this day, as may be recalled, that quotations on the Berlin Bourse slumped heavily. The connection is obvious.

It is thus possible, perhaps probable, that another date has been set by Hitler for beginning hostilities. What is, however, not only probable but beyond any possibility of intelligent doubt that Czechoslovakia is to be assaulted. Two chief factors assure this.

One of these is the form and extent of the preparations being made. A recent report told of 300,000 workers employed in building the fortifications along Germany's western border. A fortnight ago there were 220,000 alone in the Saar district. On the Moselle-Kaiserslautern line there were 118,000 more. Three weeks ago Goering ordered the employment on fortifications of old-age pensioners past the age of 65, provided they were able to work, and promised that no deduction would be made from their pensions although they were paid for working. I have a list of eight great industrial plants—among them the I. G. Farben and Benz—who were together ordered to release 3,350 workers for work on the western line of defenses.

The other factor which makes war certain is the economic factor. Striking evidence of the manner in which the country's whole economic structure has suffered from the demands of the militarists is the situation of the German railroads.

In 1936, when the armament industry began to require vast additional supplies of copper and bearing materials, the railroad had to find substitutes. Supplies of rails were also limited, so that good rails had to be taken from branch lines to repair the main lines, while the inadequate rails were transferred to the branch lines.

Industry is hampered and crippled in like manner. The purchasing agent of a great Berlin cable plant reports that copper can be had in only tiny quantities, and then only for goods to be exported. Delay is encountered in getting insulating materials; jute, silk and rubber can be had only with permission of the military authorities. Deliveries cannot be promised in less than six to nine months.

It means war. There is no other way out.

The Court Vacancy

By Ernest Lindley

Will The President Name Frankfurter?

EVER SINCE Mr. Roosevelt was elected President the first time it has been assumed in New Deal circles that he would appoint Felix Frankfurter to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Frankfurter has been called the President's "No. 1 adviser." That is inaccurate: Everyone who has observed Mr. Roosevelt for any length of time knows that his advisers cannot be ranked like tennis players. At various times he has "No. 1" advisers on specific subjects, but none who can be said to outrank all others in general influence. Mr. Frankfurter has been an important adviser, directly through his access to the President, and indirectly as the sponsor of a host of the Roosevelt Administration's best lawyers—many of them inspired by his social and economic philosophy.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Frankfurter became acquainted more than 20 years ago as colleagues in the Wilson Administration. Mr. Frankfurter's work as assistant to the Secretary of Labor, counsel of the President's Mediation Commission and chairman of the War Labor Policies Board brought him in close touch with the Navy Department, where Mr. Roosevelt was in charge of labor policies.

* * * *

WHILE MR. ROOSEVELT was Governor of New York, Mr. Frankfurter visited Albany occasionally, usually leaving an idea or two. He was one of the few intellectual leaders who were convinced before the Democratic National Convention of 1932 that Mr. Roosevelt was a true progressive—while several of Mr. Roosevelt's most enthusiastic supporters today were either on the sidelines or urging the nomination of Alfred E. Smith or Newton D. Baker. After the national convention Mr. Frankfurter organized the Progressives-for-Roosevelt movement in New England and contributed sundry memoranda for the portfolio then kept by Raymond Moley.

Mr. Frankfurter could have been Solicitor General in March, 1933—and if he had been, the Roosevelt Administration would not have got off to such a miserable start in the courts. Subsequently it was reported, but not verified, that he had been offered the governorship of the Federal Reserve Board. He brushed aside every suggestion that he take office with the same answer that he made to the tender of a place on the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in 1932 by Gov. Ely, a right-wing Democrat. He said he regarded his work as teacher as more important.

* * * *

THAT MR. FRANKFURTER would not spurn a seat on the United States Supreme Court has been taken for granted in the Roosevelt Administration. Until now he has been regarded as the appropriate successor to Justice Brandeis, with whose social and economic views he has long been in general accord. Both come from Massachusetts. Although Mr. Frankfurter's activities as a reformer and politician also suggest a closer kinship in spirit to Justice Brandeis, he was a warm friend and disciple of the late Justice Holmes and the late Justice Cardozo. The argument is now advanced that the seat occupied successively by these two jurists is a special seat which should be filled by the most distinguished liberal judge or lawyer who can be found, regardless of geography or any other consideration. The movement to bring about the appointment of Mr Frankfurter, recently launched by Senator Norris, has strong backing in the Roosevelt Administration.

Mr. Frankfurter is not, however, the first choice of many New Dealers. On the score of legal craftsmanship as well as of literary style, some of them probably would give a higher rating to Benjamin V. Cohen. In the Roosevelt Administration are probably half a dozen other lawyers of high caliber who by the test of hard work for the New Deal are perhaps more deserving that Mr. Frankfurter of promotion to the Supreme Court. Moreover, some New Dealers question whether Mr. Frankfurter's liberalism, especially where economic questions are concerned, is broad and flexible enough to meet the requirements of the next 10 or 20 years.

* * * *

ACCORDING TO Dr. Gallup's polls, Mr. Frankfurter is the first choice of members of the legal profession for advancement to the Supreme Court—outranking even John W. Davis and Newton D. Baker. Possibly that reflects only the fact that Mr. Frankfurter has supplied bright young lawyers for the corporation law firms even more generously than for the Government or the labor movement. Possibly it is only a strictly professional appraisal of his ability. But the support of any proposed nominee for the Supreme Court by a large segment of the bar is bound to stir up skepticism concerning the authenticity of his liberalism.

Many New Dealers have not forgotten that when Mr. Roosevelt was fighting for his Supreme Court bill, Mr. Frankfurter remained aloof. Mr. Frankfurter could not actively have supported that bill without repudiating passages in some of his writings. But similar difficulties did not stop liberal lawyers from supporting Mr. Roosevelt's proposed judicial reform; and still others had never been guilty of elevating the Supreme Court to the level of an untouchable symbol.

Mr. Frankfurter's supporters in the Administration include some, however, who fought and bled for the Supreme Court bill. Their crowning argument for his appointment to the court now is that there is imperative need for a liberal jurist who will command instantly the respect of his colleagues, who may be able to persuade the other liberal members of the court to work together more harmoniously. Without professing to know the President's mind on the subject, some of them are willing to wager that Mr. Frankfurter will get the job.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett.

Of Refugees.

THERE IS something indomitable, magnificently childlike, about Dorothy Thompson. Faced with a problem, she marches forth to solve it. This book, she says, introducing her own "Refugees: Anarchy or Organization?" (Random House, $1) "was written in great haste, simply because it seemed to the author that it had to be done." It had to be done; no one else was doing it; so Dorothy Thompson did it.

"We who still profess to be civilized," Hamilton Fish Armstrong says in another foreword, "are enervated by constantly reading and hearing about the repeated victories of the twentieth century barbarians." We are. But not Dorothy Thompson. She has a child's flaming faith that whatever is wrong can and must be set right, and at once. It is an old American attitude, somewhat discredited since Mr. Wilson's loose talk of saving the world for democracy; but it has more point than our enervated total isolationists admit. In Dorothy Thompson it has its roots in the upstate Methodist parsonage where she grew up.

Four million people have, since the World War ended, been compelled by political pressure to leave their homes, a migration unprecedented since 15 centuries ago, the Asiatic peoples began pressing the German tribes southward into the Roman Empire. Each year the number grows; Hitler's conquest of Austria this year added new hundreds of thousands to the number of men and women without country . . . And most of the world, busy with its own depression and unemployment, meets the problem only by shutting tighter its national doors. Enervated liberals agree that it is too bad.

DOROTHY THOMPSON, who has been telling most of the publishers of New York for the last five years that she had no time to write a book, did something more. She wrote the lead article in the April issue of "Foreign Affairs" on the plight of the refugees. Shortly afterward President Roosevelt invited the nations of the world to confer on the refugee problem, and 32 of them accepted his invitation. Myron Taylor, retired chief of the United States Steel Corporation, represented the United States in the conference which subsequently met at Evian; George Rublee, another American, named permanent director of the committee there organized, sailed for Europe to take up his new duties, on the record-breaking trip of the Queen Mary . . . "There need be no secret that the State Department's action was stimulated by the article by Dorothy Thompson," says Hamilton Fish Armstrong.

To stimulate the call of an international conference was not enough for this upstate parson's daughter. She not only saw a need; her active mind at once began to formulate ways and means of meeting that need. So she wrote this book. It is probable that the first business of each member of the permanent intergovernmental committee, about to meet under George Rublee's directorship, will be to read Dorothy Thompson's "Refugees."

"What the whole refugee problem needs today, more than anything else," says Dorothy Thompson, "is another Nansen—one man, or a few men, with his simple belief in human dignity, his faith in human decency, his enormous sense of personal honor and responsibility, and his confidence in the power of humanity to organize and mobilize to meet its emergencies." If there is not one such man, perhaps there is one such woman.

Refugees as Assets.

THE PRACTICAL FAITH which Miss Thompson voices in this book is her own certainty that these refugees, if only their wanderings be organized and financed rather than left to penurious chance, may become assets to the countries which receive them, not subjects of charity. She even works out an ingenious scheme by which she believes the German government can be persuaded to finance the establishment of Jewish colonies in other countries, and she illustrates her point by telling an amazing story of a trade-and-transfer arrangement between the Nazi government and the Haavara in Palestine, by which $2,000,000 marks of capital values have already been transferred from Germany to Palestine!

The Federal Diary

Hot Weather Notes.

Because the weather is a blister, were turn to lines of least resistance, to hot weather thinking that runs something like this:

S. M. Barrett, the I. D. R. A.'s Ivy Lee, might have won a prize as the best dressed man on the I. D. R. A.'s moonlight boat ride Monday night . . . . And we were a little fearful, at one juncture, that the boat would dock back in Washington before the contest about "Miss Popularity" was decided; the skipper was, in fact, ringing his docking bells before the I. D. R. A. knew definitely that Brunettes Jo Oswald and Dorothy Grimm had taken honors along with Grace Hazard . . . And there seems to be some dispute whether the election was for "Miss Personality" or "Miss Popularity."

Between taking readings of the stars and flights into higher mathematics, two boys at the United States Naval Academy turn to arguing about who said, "What the country needs is a good 5-cent cigar." So one writes in, saying, please set me straight as to whether it was Teddy Roosevelt or Vice President Marshall?" It was Vice President Marshall, gentlemen. Teddy Roosevelt said, "Don't shoot 'til you see the whites of their eyes," and Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "I'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The I. D. R. A., which introduced badminton to Washington, now will go in for bicycle polo—and we hope for the best . . . The players will wear football helmets and the first demonstration will be held on Saturday, August 27, when the association's second annual field day is held at Fort Hunt . . . The game, we hear, follows the usual lines of polo, only it's played on bicycles instead of ponies . . . When the polo is done, they will throw a bathing beauty contest, with Washington newspaper picture editors as judges . . . Applicants will be judged on camera appeal, which is eye appeal and fair enough . . . Thereafter, the crowd will hold track events, a swimming meet, a softball game and a pistol shoot . . .

Chapter Two.

Here is the second installment of the article, "Thirty Years' Service Retirement," by John S. Beach, former chief of the retirement division, Bureau of Pensions:

It may not be amiss to observe at this point that the former militant organization which played such an important part in early retirement legislation seems to have lost its effectiveness due to lack of solidarity within its ranks, and also because of defeation of some of its allied members. This is regrettable, for only through united and harmonious effort can the best results be obtained. Consider the dissension in the ranks of organized labor today from which a lesson may be learned.

The retirement law has now been in operation more than 18 years. It would seem that by this time the organized employes would realize that there is no hope to secure favorable action on retirement after 30 years' service at the option of the employe and irrespective of the attained age; so that fetish may as well be abandoned. Even if the Neely bill had been enacted into law there would still have been dissatisfaction among certain groups of employes because of its inequitable provisions. The fight for an equitable law would have continued.

Having diagnosed the disease, it seems appropriate that a remedy should be prescribed. It is the opinion of this writer that a fair, equitable and liberal retirement law would provide:

(a) Retirement at 60 years of age or thereafter upon completion of 30 years' service, optional either with the employe or the Government. In the event that neither exercises the option before the employe reaches 70 years of age, then the employe shall be automatically retired unless exempted by executive order.

(b) Retirement at 65 years of age or thereafter upon completion of 15 years' of service, optional either with the employe or the Government and with the same limitation as in (a) above. In any event at least 60 days' notice shall be given of the date fixed for retirement.

Under the foregoing plan it would be possible for any employe to remain in the service until 70 years of age, which would be the age for compulsory retirement for all employes, unless exempted by executive order. Continuances as contemplated by the Neeley bill would not be at all necessary, as employment between 60 and 70 years would be by mutual agreement between the employe and the administrative officer concerned.

It is believed that a bill incorporating the foregoing provisions will win the support of all fair-minded employes and that it will also meet the approval of administrative officials generally.

Furthermore, it is safe to predict that the cost to the Government will not be greater than under the present law; this is particularly true if the contributions should be increased to 4 per cent. Many employes who under the present law are forced to retire at 62 and 65 years would remain in the service longer, thus decreasing the amount paid them for annuities.

Reinicke Assigned To Navy Cargo Ship

Commander Frederick G. Reinicke, former Naval Academy athlete and once in charge of public relations at the Navy Department, was assigned yesterday to help superintend the fitting out of the auxiliary cargo vessel Capella and to command the ship after she is recommissioned.

The Capella, out of commission since 1924, is being reconditioned at the Norfolk Navy Yard and, it is expected, will be recommissioned about October 10. Reinicke, a graduate of the Naval Academy in 1910, is now attached to the fourth naval district headquarters at Philadelphia.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Camp Ritchie, Md., Aug. 16.—Private William E. Payne, jr., of Company A, was today declared the best drilled and neatest appearing enlisted man in the Fifth Battalion, Organized Marine Corps Reserve, after more than an hour's competition in which representatives of all companies participated.

Private Payne, who is colonel of the Arlington High School cadets during the scholastic year, was pitted in the final round of the drill against Private J. Ludwig, of Company B, a former regular.

Half of the battalion will engage in the platoon combat problem Wednesday as preparatory practice for the battalion's combat maneuvers scheduled Friday.

Municipal Building Is Voted Down by Laurel's Residents

A mass meeting of residents of Laurel, Md., last night voted down a proposal to seek WPA aid in constructing an $80,000 municipal building after Capt. Julian B. Anderson, of the Laurel National Guard, submitted a petition bearing the names of 200 opponents of the project.

Plans for financing the project called for requesting the Works Progress Administration to supply labor with the town furnishing materials at estimated costs ranging from $26,000 to $45,000 to be met by increasing the property tax rate 9 cents per $100 valuation.

Only two of the more than 150 persons attending the meeting, held in the National Guard Armory, supported the project. They were Robert McCeney and Col. G. W. S. Musgrave who cited a need for providing employment for the town's jobless.

Thirty Years Come Back to Life In 'Alexander's Ragtime Band'!

Irving Berlin's 'Cavalcade of Music' Will Recall Many Past Events of Note in the Theater; Whiteman Comes Here Saturday; Strickland Signs; Theater Notes.

THE older you are—up to a certain point, that is—the better you will like it.

I mean to say that "Alexander's Ragtime Band," previewed by the guys and gals of the drama desks yesterday afternoon, is such a nostalgic and reminiscent picture that those whose memories are able to hark back to the year 1911, when its title song became the reigning hit of the music and stage world, and then follow the course of the Irving Berlin compositions down through the years to the present, will derive multiplied pleasure from one of the most perfectly molded screen entertainments that has come along in many a long day.

BELL.

As each of the 20-odd Berlin song hits of the past is revived as an essential part of an engaging romance of "show business," the theatergoer with the memory will find himself recalling the circumstances of its original introduction and reliving many happy hours in the playhouse. There will come to life in his mind's eye many old favorite vaudeville acts, some of the foremost bands and orchestras of bygone years, many editions of the Ziegfeld "Follies" and other top-shelf revues, musical comedies and extravaganzas. And with them, of course, will come back the artists who sang the songs, captured the public and rode to fame and fortune on their composer's genius for lilting melody and superlative lyrics.

While all this is going on in the parade of recollections, the consciousness will begin to dawn that Irving Berlin's music is more substantial, more enduring and more worthy of a permanent place in America's musical development than a great many people ever have suspected. These old tunes are as captivating and gracious to the ear now as they were 10, 20 or 30 years ago and provide a musical narrative that is as fresh as if it had been written yesterday.

Irving Berlin and Twentieth Century-Fox, producers of the picture, denominate it a "cavalcade of Irving Berlin songs." It seems to be something a little more than that. In the light of past events, it is possible to trace through the lyrics and mellow beauty of several of Berlin's most melodious ballads a thin thread of his own life that is authentically autobiographical. This is an incidental, not primary, quality of the story that has been woven out of a score of the best of the 600 numbers Berlin has composed in his professional lifetime. Perhaps the picture is so good because its creator knew so well what he was talking about when he contrived it

The action has its inception with the introduction of the new song, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," in "Dirty Eddie's" cabaret out in San Francisco, which might be construed vaguely as a sort of transplantation of "Nigger Mike" Salter's, on the New York Bowery, to the opposite side of the continent. It progresses then through succeeding periods in history to the outbreak of the Great War, America's entrance and the aftermath of that titanic conflict in the lives of the principal characters in the pseudo-fictional drama.

In the musical organization from which the film, in the story, is made to derive its name, may be identified a composite of many of the popular bands that have played so important a part in the development of modern American music—Art Hickman, Paul Whiteman and many more. All as I say, very nostalgic, very reminiscent and very delightful to the theatergoer with a memory. For the generation born yesterday, it will prove no less a hit.

But Irving Berlin is not the only one who has contributed to the abundant entertainment afforded by "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Alice Faye, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche never have been better than in the pivotal characters in both the story and the exposition of the inherent beauty of Berlin's music. To establish the nature of their support, it is only necessary to mention such names as Ethel Merman, Jack Haley, Jean Hersholt, Helen Westley, John Carradine, Paul Hurst, Wally Vernon, Ruth Terry, Douglas Fowley, Eddie Collins and Chick Chandler, all made to order for this sort of thing—or vice versa, as the case may be. All that needs to be known about the direction is that Henry King did it.

Did I enjoy reliving three decades in an hour and 40 minutes? Boy, I ate it up—and so will you!

The episode of the military show, staged by the boys in the training camp, in "Alexander's Ragtime Band," will recall to many Washingtonians the similar production staged in the old Poli's Theater by the doughboys stationed out on Florida avenue at Camp Meigs. The prime mover in that memorable enterprise was the illustrious blackface comic, Frank Tinney. Frank never could quite solve the puzzle of how he happened to be commissioned a captain in the United States Army, war or no war. Finally, he decided that it wasn't his fault. It seems that he went into an Army outfitter's shortly after being recruited for service and asked to be fitted with a second lieutenant's uniform. After much searching, the merchant had to admit that he couldn't fit him in a second lieutenant's uniform but had a captain's that practically was made to order for him.

"So," said Frank, "what could I do? I had to be a captain!"

Speaking of Paul Whiteman—you'll find it back there, somewhere—it is important to lovers of the best in modern dance music to remember that this pioneer in his field, with all of his instrumentalists and specialists, is coming to town for two cruises down the Potomac and back this Saturday night aboard the S. S. Potomac of the Potomac River Line. (I have been trying to squeeze the word "Potomac" into this item, but it seems to be no go.)

This is a bit of a distinction for the popular excursion boat, for Whiteman is recognized as one of the potent figures in latter-day musical development in this country. My only fear would be that there will be so many passengers aboard the craft that there will be no room for dancing, except on your partner's feet.

The cruises, as I understand it, are to leave the Seventh street wharf at 8:30 p. m. and 12:45 a. m.

Something else to be happy about is the announcement that F. Cowles Strickland was in the Capital over last week-end, to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the Washington Civic Theater, and signed on the dotted line, or pledged his word, or something, to be back as director of this enterprising acting group again next season. Under Mr. Strickland's directorial supervision last year, the Civic Theater made the longest and most rapid strides in its brief history. It is a comforting thought that this conspicuous progress will be continued under the same auspices next season.

Since Publicist Ray Bell—no relation—of the Loew interests in Washington, seems to feel that every preview must present a "double-feature" program, yesterday afternoon's goings-on also embraced the first installment of the new "Dick Tracy" serial, based on the cartoon character of the ace G-man, who catches bullets in his teeth and slaps the gangsters around like so many Lilliputians. From this first glimpse, "The Adventures of Dick Tracy," or whatever it is they call it, will out-heigho "The Lone Ranger" in whoop-de-do melodrama. It goes in at the Columbia on August 26, I think the man said.

It won't be long now, so he told your reporter Monday night, before Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National Theater, will have definite word from New York as to the date upon which his new season will open and a comparatively complete list of the season's bookings. That information is being drawn up for him now in the offices of the Erlanger estate, which controls the destinies of the National.

September 12 seems to have the edge as the opening date, but the attraction for that week has not as yet been officially announced. More of this later.

Wilted-Collar-and-Curdled-Disposition Note.

Just think back to the time when no theater had a real refrigeration plant and that "15 degrees cooler than the street" business was only a lotta hooey. Maybe that will help!

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

HEDDA HOPPER

Dear Diary: 6:30 a. m.: Popped out of bed, right onto the floor, not on my face, silly, but for five minutes exercise.

Cold shower, which really woke me. Orange juice, coffee—off to Paramount, where I relaxed while Dottie Ponelal gave me a new face. Then each hair arranged faultlessly. Then into glad rags, and onto New York Street scene.

8:30 a. m.: Rode behind an old gray mare who was pulling a refuse wagon, and sang with Charlie Butterworth and two white wings who manned the wagon, "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes." They asked if we knew the lyrics. We answered: "Sure—sure." I'll bet you think you do, too.

10 a. m.: Did a snip with Jack Benny's Rochester, known to his mother as Eddie Anderson, who was bemoaning the fact that his color was cafe au lait, and he wants to play a Chinaman. Believe he has his eye on Charlie Chan. We took five minutes off trying to figure out a make-up before giving up.

10:30 a. m.: While waiting for the next setup, I asked George Archainbaud, director, how he got into this business. He was sent over from France by the Eclat Co., who were making our best pictures. George was to learn the technical end here, then go on to Japan and establish another studio there. That was 26 years ago. His first stop was Fort Lee, N. J., where he went into the printing department, run by women, whose snickers the first day annoyed him. Not understanding English, he tried to find out why. Discovered they were laughing at his wrist watch, which they considered sissy—first one they'd ever seen.

11 a. m.: Bob Hope arrived with quips as fast and cleancut as a rain of bullets from a machine gun. He never relaxes a moment. Always thinking up new gags for the picture and doesn't care who uses them so long as they get in.

11:30 a. m.: Producer Mel Shauer joined us, wearing a broad grin. His beautiful wife, Rosita Moreno, is on her way home, after making pictures in South America for six months.

An hour for lunch in the commissary, and a chat with Harry Sherman, producer of "Hopalong Cassidy." He is just back from El Paso, and said the latest one, "In Old Mexico," took the front page away from Doug Corrigan.

1 p. m.: Back on the set found Honey Chile Wilder, Southern belle, who's been under contract at RKO for two years without doing a picture, but is doing all right with us. Overdoes accent a snip, but it's okay. Gets all the boys—girls, too. Cute as a button except for her hairdo, which looked like a worn-out rug—you know me, always buttin' in. She didn't like it either, but was afraid to ask the hairdresser, who perpetrated it, to change it.

Honey Chile made her first appearance in vaudeville with Bob Hope when she was 17. Before the first show, Bob was nervous for fear she'd be scared. When she had been on the stage five minutes he was scared—wondering how he could get his audience back again. The wise New York boys, like Blumey, Willie Stewart and George Vanderbilt, fell for her and fell hard—but she was such a baby! They never found out that she already had had a husband—the marriage was annulled.

2 p. m.: Laura Hope Crews hove in sight, followed by Roscoe Karns, her picture husband. Laura did a comic yell, which sounded like a walrus calling its mate.

3 p. m.: Shirley Ross appeared, collecting for one of the wardrobe girls who had to have an emergency operation. In two hours Shirley had collected $400—all cash.

Actresses are like fire horses—no matter what you're doing, when you hear the gong; off you go! Some call it work, but to me it's fun, always has been—always will be.

Father Flanagan Portrays Himself

Father Edward J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, Nebr., became a motion picture actor in Hollywood when he portrayed himself. The film was "City of Little Men," a short subject which deals with the community that Father Flanagan founded 25 years ago, and where he has cared for 4,500 boys.

When the monsignor arrived on the set, he found Robert Taylor's dressing room, with the actor's name crossed out, and his in its place. There was also a director's chair with his name painted on the back.

During the morning, he worked in two "takes" and then went to lunch with Director William Thiele. During lunch, Father Flanagan turned to the director and said, laughingly:

"I think I'll go Hollywood."

Later in the day, Spencer Tracy visited the set and asked Father Flanagan for pointers on how to portray himself on the screen, for Tracy is portraying Father Flanagan in "Boys Town."

Most of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer short was filmed at Boys Town.

Instructions.

Instructions to Cameraman Daniel Clark during the filming of scenes in Callandar of the Dionne quintuplets for "Five of a Kind" were to "let the cameras run till the film is gone." Some of the best scenes were those, not from the script, but created at the moment by 4-year-old Cecile, Yvonne, Annette, Marie and Emilie.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

Paris, Aug. 16.

THE ANTIAIRCRAFT SEARCHLIGHTS shoot their beams into the skies in the Place de la Concorde. Companion lights dart from beneath the Arc de Triomphe. And all Paris, stomping along the Champs Elysees, roars "Vive le roi" as the lights converge into a pattern of the Union Jack . . . But le roi cannot see the populace rejoicing at his presence. "King George will not be harmed," the chief of police had vowed, "if I have to call out the entire army to protect him." Call out the army he did. And so the best view le roi had of Paris was from a hollow square of cavalrymen.

• • • •

NEWSPAPERMEN covering the event had to apply for press permits four months in advance. With each application, six photos of the reporter were submitted—two of them for inspection by Scotland Yard . . . Police passes were required for every person entering a building within one block of the line of march. And a policeman was stationed upon every roof-top—prepared.

• • • •

WE WATCHED THE PARADE from 33 Champs Elysees. From a balcony next door, at the offices of Twentieth Century-Fox, flew the only American flag visible along the line of march . . . The mob suddenly turned their backs to the parade, pointed to the balcony above us, and cheered—not "le roi!" not "la reine" . . . but for a lady of France who is almost twice Queen Elizabeth's age—Mlle. Mistinquette, the lady of the legs.

• • • •

BORIS SMOLER, American reporter who was ousted from Germany, is in Paris now . . . Smoler had been summoned to the office of the Nazi police many times, but each time he arrived accompanied by the American Consul. The last day, however, two members of the secret police arrived at his hotel and ordered him to headquarters. The reporter insisted upon first phoning the American Consul, but the police refused to allow it and prepared to hustle him off . . . They were interrupted—and Smoler was saved—by the appearance, at his doorway, of Elias Tobenkin, collecting material for peace propaganda, backed by the Carnegie Fund.

• • • •

THEODORE DREISER will leave Paris shortly for Spain. He is writing a play, with music . . . William Wyler, the movie director, has relinquished all hopes of entering Spain. He discovered that the only way he could get into loyalist territory was by submarine . . French politicians, resentful of Sir Neville Chamberlain's pro-Fascist tendencies, pronounce his name "J'aime Berlin"—"I love Berlin."

• • • •

VINCENT SHEEAN, whose "Personal History" will be screened by Walter Wagner, is arranging to appear in the complete movie . . . The famous Israels department store in Berlin was completely aryanized—except in one measure. The Nazi officials decided to retain the Israels name, as good will.

OTTO, THE HAPSBURG PRETENDER to the empty throne of Austria, is living in France and assures his intimates that he has had word regarding Schuschnigg and the treatment being accorded him. Otto insists that Austria's former premier is not at a hotel but at a concentration camp. He works in the fields all morning, must spend two hours each day reading Hitler's "Mein Kampf," and then is questioned by two political experts concerning interpretations of various parts of the book . . . Before retiring, Schuschnigg listens to the recorded speeches he had made before Anschluss, while the two experts criticise each of his phrases.

Film Dangers Seem Tame to Young Actress

Andrea Leeds' Exciting Childhood a Drama of Many Thrills.

By Andrea Leeds,

Written for the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 16.—I'm lucky to be in pictures for many reasons—principally because I'm lucky to be alive!

Before starting work in Hollywood films I experienced a lot of exciting drama that if it had been photographed, probably would have been considered "exaggerated fiction."

One of my earliest memories is of being carried 50 miles through a reptile-infested tropic jungle. I was 3 years old and rode in a basket strapped to the back of a sunbronzed guide.

During the years I lived in wild mining districts of Mexico, where my father, Charles Edward Leeds, was employed as an engineer and manager, we went through three bitterly fought revolutions. By the time I was 9 I had seen men shot dead before my eyes. I was only two blocks away when Pancho Villa was killed at Parral, Mexico. I once escaped kidnaping by dashing away in an airplane.

Before that 50-mile trek into the tropic jungle I had sailed down from San Francisco on an old steamship with my parents. We were caught in a storm. Life boats were torn loose and our staterooms flooded. The boat sank shortly after we reached port.

Met the Garobe.

It was in Central America, too, that I made the acquaintance of the "Garobe," an animal that looks like a cross between an alligator and a gila monster. They grow from 3 to 10 feet in length.

Our home in the tropics was four walls with a canvas roof. During the rainy season the "garobe" used to get on that roof somehow. Often they fell through into the room.

Right now I'm working at Universal Studios on a picture called "Youth Takes a Fling." Joel McCrea and the director, Archie Mayo, are very solicitious about my comfort. I can remember when I didn't have so much attention. During the shooting of rain scenes they worried about my catching cold. Everyone is so eager to make things easy for me—and I'm feminine enough to love it. I haven't told them about Central America, or Mexico, as it used to be.

When we left the tropics, father was made manager of a gold mine at Cieneguilla, Mexico. It is 100 miles from Parral, the nearest railway town, and can be reached only over rough mountain trails. Bandits, Indians and rebel soldiers used to swarm down from the hills to prey upon mine operators.

A Narrow Escape.

Conditions in Mexico are different now. Thousands of Americans vacation there every year. But in those days, authorities had difficulty trying to prevent lawless raids. Especially in remote mining districts. In fact, the gold from the mine used to be flown to the railroad at Parral by airplane.

Kidnap threats eventually caused me to leave the country. Father had received several letters which threatened him. His answer was to strengthen the guards about the mine. When the bandits threatened to kidnap me, father immediately forbade me to take horseback rides. Confined to the house for a month I grew restless and persuaded him to let me take a short horseback ride. Two armed guards went with me.

A short distance from the house we were suddenly surprised by bandits who rode toward us madly from three directions. Somehow, we raced home to safety ahead of them.

That night I was taken to the airport and I flew to Parral and took the train back to the United States. I guess that was the biggest "scare" I ever had. If it hadn't been for father's insistence, and the plane, perhaps I wouldn't be in pictures today—nor alive!

Sailor Himself.

Director Lloyd Bacon, now megaphoning "Wings of the Navy" for Warner Bros., is a lieutenant commander in the United States Naval Reserve.

Charlie McCarthy Has New Complaint When Shoes Ruined

Arc lights blazed, cameras clicked, flash-lights flared—and Charlie McCarthy was nearly speechless for the first time in his life—last week when he, with Edgar Bergen went through the ceremony of having their footprints impressed in concrete in the forecourt of Hollywood's famous Grauman's Chinese Theater.

"Bergen, we're famous," was all he could utter.

The ceremony, which had been delayed pending the finish of Charlie's new picture, "Letter of ntroduction," was attended by screen and radio notables. Among Bergen's guests were his long-time friend of vaudeville days, Ken Murray, and John M. Stahl, who directed him in his new picture.

After the ceremony Charlie found his voice.

"That was darned nice of you," he said to Sid Grauman, for whom the theater is named, "but who's going to pay for these ruined shoes!"

Freedom of Sneeze.

Flies So Child Can Be Real Native Son

California has converted a New Yorker.

Mrs. John Garfield, wife of the actor, flew from New York to Hollywood in a specially chartered airliner so their child could be born in California. She was accompanied by two special nurses.

Garfield became so fascinated with California before he had finished his first film role in "Four Daughters" that he wanted his first-born to be a native son or daughter. He telephoned his wife in New York to ask her whether she felt up to the trip. She said "yes" so the expectant father booked all the passages on an airliner.

The Garfield "native" is expected this month.

Tennis Seen Good Sport To Lose Fat

Helen Wills Moody Example of Exercise Keeping Figure Young.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU needed any evidence as to what regular exercise can do to keep you young and beautiful, you have an overwhelming amount of it in the person of Helen Wills Moody.

You should really see this champion close up to appreciate her good looks. She seems to have grown prettier every year. She has no crows' feet, and she has the figure of an 18-year-old girl; in fact, her weight of 138 pounds is slightly less than it was at that age. She is 5 feet 7½ inches tall, and has these measurements: Bust, 36 inches; hips, 35 inches; waist, 26 inches.

Consistency Important.

Like any true champion, Mrs. Moody is extremely interested in the effects of diet and exercise on weight. She believes that the weight averages are a little high, but has found that "if you play a game like tennis, you can weigh more and look as if you weighed less. In that way, you have plenty of strength and at the same time look as if you were fairly slim." That fits right in with the theory that muscle is compact and weighs more but looks better than fat.

Perhaps the explanation of her amazing ability to stage comebacks is in the fact that she never has, at any time, given up exercise. During the 18 months that she was recuperating from a back injury and unable to play tennis, she swam regularly, because "my father, who is a doctor, advised me that it would be almost impossible for me to get back into championship form unless I kept supple.

As to diet: "So many new things are always being discovered in diet that I think it is a good idea always to have a variety of food," Mrs. Moody told me. "Sometimes the new things don't turn out so well."

She Exercises, Too.

Her tennis activities enable this champion to relax without the slightest difficulty. She can go to sleep and sleep soundly to within ten minutes of a tournament! And she always likes nine hours' sleep. There's no question but that such ability to relax keeps away the wrinkles.

As a balance for her tennis, however, Mrs. Moody favors stretching exercises and she does a few simple ones every morning to wake up her circulation and make her feel good.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Baseball-Playing Husband Calls Wife Lazy Because She Doesn't Work Their Garden; Is He Justified.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 22 and have been married almost three years. My husband is two years my senior. We got along well until our baby was born a year ago. We live in the country, 10 miles from town—where my husband clerks in a store. Now he complains because (he thinks) I am lazy and do not do my share of the work. Of course, much of my time is taken up in giving the baby the proper food, care and attention (which my husband, too, thinks is important). Besides this, I wash, iron, mend, clean, bake, churn, cook, can 400 quarts of fruits and vegetables every year, make all of the baby's and my own clothes and help cultivate the garden. We do not have electricity; therefore, I am denied the electrical devices which make housekeeping much easier. I am considered a clean, efficient, economical housekeeper (and I'm not saying this to brag).

My husband thinks I should do more in the garden. In fact, he thinks he shouldn't have to help there at all. Yet, he has a "snap" in his job, his employer being exceptionally good to him, letting him off from work an hour early or even for a half-day at a time, without "docking" his wages. Then, too, business at this store is not so flush and he has much time to sit by the electric fan in summer and by the radiator in winter, listening to the radio or reading the paper.

Nearly every morning before he leaves for work he tells me certain tasks to do, such as: can a certain vegetable, fix a pair of trousers (which he doesn't intend to wear for a week) and numerous other things which I know must be done during the week and which I intend to do. I do not let my vegetables go to waste and always get things done within a reasonable length of time. I worked at the factory eight hours a day until six months before the baby arrived, and at the same time did all by housework and did it well.

• • • •

Now, do you think I have a right to expect my husband to take care of the garden and yard—or could that possibly be my work? He is able-bodied and never mentions being tired. He gets off at 5 p. m. every other evening, and instead of devoting these evenings to chores around home, he plays on the county league baseball team, and while he gets paid for it, the money he makes would not buy the fruits and vegetables which we raise and store for winter use, and therefore, his time would be more profitably spent in the garden than on the baseball diamond.

• • • •

Am I selfish in asking him to give up baseball to be with me and the baby on the evenings he is off? I must say that he is crazy about us both and always wants us to have nice clothes and other things we need and enjoy, and often gets them for us without asking. He is considered a gentleman and takes well with the public. He does not drink, use profane language, or tobacco, but he does have this one grievous fault mentioned above. I try to do all I can to be a good, sweet wife and mother and it is my earnest desire to make our home a peaceful, happy home—but how can I do it alone, when I give my best and then get credit for only half I do? If I am to blame, can you help me? And if I am not at fault, what can I do to make my husband appreciate me more? Please answer, for this is getting the best of me.

WORKING WIFE.

A Selfish Man.

DEAR WORKING WIFE: Your husband's attitude is outrageously selfish and unfair. It is he who is lazy—not you. Certainly the yard and garden work is not your responsibility, and no part of it should be thrust on your already fully burdened shoulders. Any fair division of domestic responsibilities in a family where an able-bodied husband "clerks in a store" while his wife does the kind, variety and amount of tedious labor you are daily called upon to do, inexorably demands that he do the outdoor work. And while simple justice demands such a division of labors, the promptings of chivalry and conscience in the breast of a man who entertained a right-minded, protective devotion to his wife should render such a demand unnecessary. He should be first to forbid her to make a serf of herself; quick to obviate the possibility or the necessity of her overtaxing her nervous and physical strength, the conservation of which is all-important to the whole family's happiness and well-being.

• • • •

If your husband were other than selfish and short-sighted, he would recognize the value to himself, in material, spiritual and physical terms, of tending his own yard and garden. As you say, he stands to profit in terms of cash. Moreover, after lounging about indoors all day, he could profit physically by the mild exercise of such outdoor "home" work, probably better suited to his strength than the more violent and spasmodic exertion of the baseball diamond; while the potential spiritual benefits to the whole family of turning such a late-evening chore into a period of mutual companionability are well-nigh incalculable. To do it or not to do it spells the difference between growing in oneness of spirit with his wife and child and growing utterly apart from them.

• • • •

Your husband is allowing his easy clerking berth, and the invitation to pointless gregariousness inherent in town living, to make him go "soft" on his primary job of being a good husband and father. He is falling into the mistake of regarding you as a personal convenience, losing sight of the fact that you are his partner in a co-operative enterprise, that it is up to him to carry his end of the load, and that you have certain inalienable rights and privileges that it is his duty to concede and respect. Since he is falling into that mistake, it behooves you to call him to order, by action and utterance.

• • • •

No worth-while purpose is being, or can be, served in allowing yourself to be exploited or subjugated. It would be—it is—detrimental to his character for you to carry the lion's share of drudgery, responsibility and economical effort. It is very true that the devil finds mischief for idle hands to do, and your husband is placing himself in the way of temptations definitely inimical to solidarity in marriage in reserving his evenings for bachelor amusments. If there is work for him to do at home, he belongs at home doing it, and he will be a better man for doing it and for being held accountable for its discharge.

• • • •

Therefore, make it unmistakably clear to him that you have neither the time, the strength nor the intention to perform a task that is peculiarly his; that unless he attends to it, it shall go neglected altogether. Tell him there is no more justice in his expecting you to tend the yard and garden in addition to your other duties, than there would be in your expecting him to preserve 400 quarts of fruits and vegetables with one hand, of evening, while tending the baby with the other. Tell him if he isn't willing to hold up his rightful end of farm life, he had better remove the whole family to town, and buy garden-produce from the corner grocery store. Then, let the yard and garden go, until such time as he sees fit to assume responsibility for their proper cultivation. I realize such an attitude on your part may make for open warfare in the family, for a time at least; but prompt and justifiable rebellion against injustice is infinitely preferable to meek, unwarranted and self-damaging servitude.

Helen of Troy Influence

AT A TIME when everybody seems to be going in for bouffant, ornamental and romantic evening dresses, there are still those who cling to classic lines. For a gown that would set one apart from the crowd and perhaps incite men to quoting Homeric poetry the coolly aloof white crepe shown above is to be recommended. Worn by Myrna Loy, movie actress, it is draped along Hellenic lines that give slenderness and grace to the figure. A jewelled wheat spray motif embroiders the shoulder straps and girdle.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

YOU NEEDN'T take the 125th street ferry across the Hudson to Jersey and ask her for a free ride on the airplane swing. No dice, for she's strictly business. But our Mrs. Anna Halpin, dark and plump, is the only lady manager of a huge amusement park in the Nation, and if I'm wrong, save your stamps.

ALICE HUGHES

Mrs. Halpin presides over Palisades Park, that mass of lights you see across the lordly river from Riverside Drive these summer nights. Under her labor over 350 people, including 80 women who open lockers, act as matrons or make change in the cash-booths. It was in one of the latter that Mrs. H. began her unique career, when she was only 16 and knew the correct change for a buck. And she was curious about those odd fun-corrals. When she carried change from ride to ride, she asked and learned how the breathtaking contraptions worked. She studied and learned the psychology of handling customers. In short, she became "a showman," and there's nothing higher in the social scale than a good showman. Ask the man who runs your pet movie-house.

"Some of the men resented me at first when I became the boss," Mrs. Halpin says. "They were older than I and had been on the job for years. But as soon as they found I knew the business, everything was fine." That's the answer to most problems of working women—and I don't mean the bosses' pets.

• • • •

Recently the lady manager has been brooding. On the day young Corrigan landed in Dublin on that 6,000-mile error, she cabled him $25,000 for his ship, and he turned it down. Showman Halpin feels the old berry-box would do much better at Palisades Park than in some hole like the Smithsonian Institution!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—No summer without a newspaper romance, and this year's turned up on schedule, all smiling. Eighteen months ago Frances Mangum came to me from Washington—looking for a job of work and needing consolation about a busted marriage. I advised her to get an all-black outfit and bid for a job I knew was open at the Waldorf-Astoria publicity bureau. P. S.—She got both. In a few months she had snaffled a good spot as fashion editor for one of our afternoon papers, fell in love with the feature editor, Jack Foster, and now the carillons ring out! Marriage. How's that for a vivid, progressive year and a half in a gal's life?

• • • •

Dribbling down Broadway the other day, I saw a window display of a pretty girl (made of clay) about to drive a golf ball. Very nice show it was—except that there was no ball on the tee before the mannequin! Squirrel got it, no doubt.

• • • •

I hear that Doris Duke, one of those blonde millionairesses, just laid out $3,000 for a new tropical fish pool, but it doesn't ruffle my back hair a bit. Any gal with that money who lives so quietly and happily, and who performs public service free as she does, can buy all the fish-bowls she can afford, for all of me. No?

• • • •

I get a guffaw over a rumor here that three "Hawaiian" girls now working in a local hotel floor show are being beaued about by three local newspaper columnists. Hard-boiled sophisticates, eh? And they go for a grass skirt! I'd hate to turn them loose at an old-time street carnival with a dollar bill! They'd die of hot dogs!

• • • •

Those column fellows meet nearly every morning at 2 o'clock at the Stork Club bar to talk shop, have a soothing tonic and pick up items in the joint. Anyone with a morbid, unhealthy desire to see what those night-blooming vacuum cleaners look like can usually gratify it by dropping into Uncle Sherman Billingsley's place.

Europe's agonies continue to have odd and cramping effects on the work of buyers for American stores. For various political reasons which affect the American picture, our shops are looking toward Prague and Budapest, these days, and New York's biggest and most famous store is moving its central European headquarters from Vienna to the Czech capital. Look ahead. What will happen if all Europe goes to pot? Why, we'll have to create in our own country—and won't that be just, too, too horrible. Pardon me, while I give a sour chuckle!

Beiges Are Favorites For Stockings' Colors

In hosiery at the clinic showings in the Merchandise Mart at Chicago, the rose tones were stressed for fall. Rose beige is a top favorite, with gray beige shown for gray and wine costumes. Novelties are less important in hosiery, seams are thinner and stockings are proportioned to adjust to the needed length.

A silver lining for the clouds of 1938 was shown in a new raindanna, a headscarf to protect hat or hair from fall and winter storms.

Supply of Grit Need of Novices In Design Field

Carole King Tells of Her Trials and Struggles in Early Career.

A VIVACIOUS, sun-tanned young woman sat chatting in the lounge of a Washington department store yesterday. She looked so youthful in her simple black pinked frock that it was difficult to realize she was the Carole King whose original fashion designs are now featured by department stores throughout the country. Miss King's disarming Southern artlessness disguised the fact that she not only creates her own collections but is a keen-sighted promoter of her own designs. She is now touring the country on a circuit of more than 50 stores that feature her junior frocks.

To the average girl interested in the field of dress design, Miss King's rise seems a romance of business. But behind this St. Louis girl are ten years of hard study and struggle. And that is the one thing this designer feels all girls desirous of entering her field should realize—that there is a long hard grind at the bottom and no girl who is not prepared to stand up to this should attempt to become a designer.

Mother Helped.

Despite her own struggle, Carole King was more fortunate than the usual girl entering the fashion field because her youthful background fitted her for her field. Her mother taught her the rudiments of pure design and fine sewing through her own experience in custom dressmaking. Later Carole went to the Traphagen School of Costume Design, from which she sallied forth with high illusions and ideas. Today she cautions girls against walking out of school with too many expectations, as the suit and cloak trade can be an exacting mistress of a novice's time, energy and courage.

Because of her gratitude for helping hands along her own way, Miss King make a yearly selection of half a dozen career girls from her former St. Louis college, to whom she gives opportunities in her New York studio and factory.

Her collection of dresses this fall for girls 9 to 17 years old shows a general theme of girlish sophistication that will appeal to girls returning to college and those entering the business world.

Youthful Lines.

All these frocks feature a molded bust line and uplifted silhouette. Spun rayon, cool looking for the present and suitable for wear the year around, is a popular fabric. Miss King is particularly proud of one of her designs because during her last personal appearance as junior dress stylist at Northwestern University she had the thrill of observing 60 girls of assorted heights and types wearing identical frocks of this design, the models differing only in color. This straightforward button down the front model had become virtually a school uniform supplanting the traditional sweater and skirt.

Miss King titles all her designs calling them such junior catching names as Highland Lass, for a cunning Scotch plaid skirt and velveteen jacket; or Flowers for You, which describes a tea time school frock blooming with gay colored nosegays against a brick, gold or patio blue background.

Cold-Toe Winter Again, Prediction Of Shoe Stylists

A tour of the St. Louis manufacturing district discloses the open-toe type of footwear will remain popular this fall. Most lines lean to smaller openings at the toe, however. The peek-a-boo versions will be seen mostly with evening clothes.

One style man dropped a hint that "open toes will come back strong next spring."

They've streamlined it so much you'll hardly recognize the old heel this fall. The "spool" heel is very new for oxfords. The "wedge" heel extends fully under the arch and leaves a teardrop shaped footprint.

Square-toed and walled-toed walking shoes with tricky heels catch the eye of the yougер set. Another sports creation resembles the old-fashioned gaiter grandfather swore by—elastic in the side and all.

As for color, wine steals the show. Rust brown will be very good, and as usual the beloved pumps and one-straps in black suede and other dark shades will be leaders.

Wide straps and side laces are popular. So are decorative buckles and aligator trimmings.

The more feminine type with high riding vamps and tongues is the thing for afternoon wear.

Litany for a Young Business Girl

Heaven deliver me:

From thinking I know all there is to know at the end of six months, or even six years; from being patronizing to women who are older and arrogantly assuming that a fresh face and a slender waistline are all it takes to succeed; from imagining I am not made head of the office because my superiors are cattily jealous and that a "young girl never has any chance, etc., etc.;" from fondly believing that all my half-baked ideas are the only ones any good, and that all my elders are a bunch of old dodos.

• • • •

Heaven deliver me:

From becoming hard-boiled and modern; from being brittle and crisp and monosyllabic; from being sure and authoritative on all subjects; from being condescending to all who are lesser; from assuming the bossy manner in dealing with those I direct; from being snooty to strangers; from being one who cannot go out of her way to put others at ease; from creating the appearance of one whose time was big money; from being slangy and tough and swaggerish, and adopting the pose of a redoubtable go-getter.

• • • •

Heaven deliver me:

From losing my head because a few office boys and down-at-the heels married men give me a rush; from boasting my conquests in the ladies' room or the cafeteria; from thinking of myself as a poor little Red Riding Hood beset by designing men executives; from assuming that the wives of my co-workers are either dowds or mink-coated parasites; from becoming a piece of putty for public pawing in the office; from smirking and simpering and rolling my eyes when I am doing impersonal business; from developing into a woman cheapened in looks and spirit from my years in the market place.

• • • •

Heaven deliver me:

From ever becoming self-conscious over my job or imagining people are impressed when I am introduced as "Miss So and So from Thingumbobs;" from smugly believing that persons who work in smaller or less successful concerns are necessarily less capable than myself; from being patronizing to old friends who have been less successful than I have; from strutting around in the pose of a successful woman; from boasting about how friendly I am with all the bigwigs at the top and how they can't run the office without me.

• • • •

Heaven deliver me:

From becoming a difficult person, either set in my ways or with a chip on each shoulder; from not being able to give and to take, to adapt and accept, from fussing about who has the seat at the window or the best pens and pencils; from being a martyr and thinking I'm picked on; from worrying for fear I'll have to do somebody's work or do more than they do; from making my co-workers all walk upon eggs or wear fur-lined mitts when they touch me; from having to have everything done my way or Heaven help those around me!

• • • •

Heaven deliver me:

From becoming congealed; from settling down in my nice little rut and deciding that now I am finished; from assuming I've mastered my job and there is no more to be ventured; from letting my life jelly down in 9 to 5 routine and my mind go on a vacation; from hugging opinions and viewpoints that I held yesterday; from thinking I'm good or better than most, so why should I bother? from complacently basking in the light of the petty things I've accomplished; from failing to reach and struggle and travail like all the amoebas before me.

Mrs. Cary T. Grayson Takes Spotlight in Sales at Saratoga

Washington Woman Disposes of 10 Thoroughbreds From the Late Admiral's Stables; Spa Attracts Others From Capital Society.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

News of most interest to Washington society these days is still being made out of town. Saratoga, which has basked in the spotlight all month, last night centered its attention on a Washingon woman. Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, and her three sons, Gordon, Cary T., jr., and William, who sold ten thoroughbreds belonging to the late Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

After spending most of the summer at their Upperville estate, Mrs. Grayson and her sons left a few days ago for the racing resort where they are staying at the Gideon Putnam Hotel. The sale, which was one of the highlights of the Saratoga season, attracted scores of social notables who, in recent years past, were accustomed to seeing Admiral Grayson with his wife and sons at the spa in August.

Among spectators at the sale were Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett of Washington, who are spending several weeks at Saratoga; also, Breckinridge Long, former United States Ambassador to Italy, who arrived at the resort on Monday from his summer home in Nantucket and expects to be at the Gideon Putman for several days.

Virginians Center Racing Resort's Spotlight

The sale of the Grayson string of yearlings is but one in a series at which Virginia thoroughbreds and breeders have played a prominent part. William H. Lipscomb, of Raspberry Plain, near Leesburg, Va., topped the price-range for the season on August 10, when his Ksar bay colt went to Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane for $22,000. This price set a record for the first half of August sales for the past five years and has had sporting-society circles buzzing ever since it was bid. A number of the "old timers" at Saratoga recalled, however, that the price for Mr. Lipscomb's colt was far short of the figure bid by Charles Cushman several years ago when he came across with $75,000 for a horse that never has won a race. Mr. and Mrs. Cushman, who were in Saratoga recently, are now back in their Virginia home.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin and their two sons, Tyson and Kenneth, jr., are among the many Virginians still at Saratoga. Mr. Gilpin sold eight horses at the sale Monday evening.

While numbers of Virginians and Washingtonians are returning from the racing resort, an equally large number seem to be going up for the final two weeks. Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, sr., of Upperville, and Mrs. Charles Howes, of McLean, are motoring to Saratoga now for a ten-day visit.

Meanwhile, activity around the hunting country indicates that the season of "pink coats" and winding horns is not as far off as the mounting thermometer might lead you to think. D. C. Sands, M. F. H. of the Middleburg Hunt, has been cubbing several mornings recently and has jumped several foxes. Raymond Guest's recent visit to Middleburg also precipitated increased interest in the forthcoming hunting season.

Raymond Guest Prepares For Big Hunting Season

Flying down from Long Island to his home near Middleburg Mr. Guest landed on Phipps Field and then motored to the farm he bought in Clarke and Warren counties, where he is building kenneis for the pack of hounds he purchased for the New Hunt Club. While Mr. Guest was in Middleburg, Dr. Archibald C. Randolph, M. F. H. of the Piedmont fox hounds, spent the evening with him, going over plans and completing arrangements for suitable kennels.

Incidentally, Mr. Guest not long ago purchased the only pack of ringneck hounds to be found in this country. Horace Moffett, a native Virginian, who collected the pack of picturesque black animals with white rings around their throats, will train and act as huntsman for them. To be known as "Mr. Guest's Hounds," this pack will be very much in the spotlight a couple of months from now when sporting society has its fling at hunting.

Now back at his Long Island home, Mr. Guest will remain there for a brief stay, but he and his attractive wife—both of whom are widely known in Washington—will return to Virginia next month in time for the cubbing season. Their estate, purchased within the last year, consists of 20 farms, approximately 1,500 acres. The house, known far and wide as "the old Berkeley place," is a stone structure overlooking the Shenandoah River.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney is another who plans to spend the cubbing season in Virginia. Recently arriving at her Upperville, Va., home after an extended sojourn in California, she plans to be off soon for Saratoga, where she will be until the end of the racing season. Mr. Whitney has been there since the latter part of July.

Mrs. Johnson Goes To South Carolina Home for 2 Weeks

Mrs. Monroe Johnson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, left yesterday for her home in Marion, South Carolina. She will remain there until after the primaries of the coming election and expects to return to Washington in about two weeks.

Hungary's Charge Goes To N. Y. Fair Monday

Anthony de Balasy, Charge d'Affaires of the Hungarian Legation, will leave next Monday for New York, where he will take part in ceremonies connected with the building of Hungary's exhibit in the New York World's Fair.

From New York M. de Balasy will go by plane to Bangor, Me., and from there to Bar Harbor for a stay of several days. He plans to sail in October for a vacation in Hungary.

To Be Feted At Dance In Newport

Hessler Studio.

MISS ANNE SOMERVILLE GROSVENOR, daughter of Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, of New York, and niece of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, of Washington, will be feted tomorrow evening at a barn dance in Newport, to be given by Mr. Whitman, former Governor of New York, and Mrs. Whitman. Miss Grosvenor was presented in New York Thanksgiving at a supper dance in the Ritz-Carlton, and shortly afterward she came to Washington to be guest of honor at a large dance given by Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor at Wild Acres, their Bethesda, Md., estate.

Quiet Desired By Morgenthaus In Riviera Stay

Treasury Secretary, Wife and Children Conclude French Visit.

Shunning the social limelight the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., with their three children, have concluded their stay at Cap d'Antibes on the Riviera and are driving to Geneva and Zurich. They will return to France via Strausbourg and Reims to sail on the Normandie August 21.

The Morgenthaus spent their time at Cap d'Antibes very quietly, avoiding the tiled swimming pool, which is the fashionable resort for the colony there, and swimming in the ocean instead. The Secretary, who had announced he was there for a rest, spent most of the time sleeping, taking afternoon siestas and going to bed at 10 o'clock every night. Except for one sightseeing tour neither he nor his family took any part in the night life.

Paul Reynaud, Minister of Justice and former Minister of Finance in the French government, was a regular visitor at Cap d'Antibes during Secretary Morgenthau's stay.

Miss Anne Waller, Mr. Chamberlin to Marry October 8

Miss Anne Carter Waller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Joyce Waler, of Alexandria, has selected October 8 as the date of her marriage to Wellman Chamberlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Chamberlin. It will be an evening ceremony and will take place in St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Charles Sidney Smith will be matron of honor for her sister and the other attendant will be Miss Backus. The list of ushers has not yet been completed.

One of the most important of the prenuptial events will be a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Chamberlain. It will take place August 28, at Graystone, home of the Chamberlins, at Waterford, Va.

Miss Waller will entertain Saturday at luncheon for two brides-elect, who will marry before she does. They are Miss Page Matheson, whose bridesmaid Miss Waller will be when Miss Matheson, daughter of Col. and Mrs. J. R. D. Matheson, marries Lieut. Ellery Niles, jr., on September 3; and Miss Margaret Rust, whose wedding will take place on September 8, when she will marry Lieut. William Welby Beverly.

Cuba Envoy, Sister Back From Miami

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, returned to Washington yesterday morning from Miami, accompanied by his sister, Senora Ana Martinez Fraga de Carabia, of Havana. Dr. Fraga went to Miami to meet her.

When the two arrived at Union Station yesterday morning all members of the Cuban Embassy staff now in town were there to greet them. Included in the group was the Ambassador's niece, Senorita Ana Maria Carabia Martinez, who has been her uncle's hostess at the Cuban Embassy for several months.

Boschens to Stay Here Until Autumn; Daughter Returns

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick W. Boschen, who make their home at the Wardman Park, have been joined by their daughter, Miss Betty Boschen, who has been visiting friends in South Carolina. The family plans to remain in Washington for the rest of the summer.

Today Miss Virginia Ridgeway, who has been spending several days in Baltimore, will arrive to visit Miss Boschen. Miss Ridgeway, who is the daughter of Col. Matt Ridgeway, formerly resided here with her parents. Her father is now stationed in San Francisco.

At the Raleigh.

Bethesda Woman's Club Activity Awaits Opening Of Newly Decorated Quarters on September 27

Summer Program Curtailed to Permit Renovation.

Bicycling Group Busy, But Other Sections Remain Idle.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Bethesda Woman's Club abandoned its summer program this year in order to have newly-decorated and comfortably heated quarters for its winter activities. The clubhouse, at Georgetown road and Sonoma avenue, now closed for renovation and the installation of a new oil burner, will formally opened for the fall on Tuesday afternoon, September 27.

Mrs. Edward L. Morrison, new president of the club, will assume her duties at the first session and the club will be open every Tuesday thereafter for programs of the various departments. The first Tuesday of each month will be devoted to recreational activities—walking, bicycling and postures exercises, and the second to the regular business meeting in the morning, followed by luncheon at 12:30 and an open forum in the afternoon. On the third Tuesday the literature department will have a luncheon meeting, and on the fourth there will be a program with a speaker, followed by tea.

The recreational group, under Mrs. J. Reed Bradley, is the only one which has pursued its program during the summer. The bicyclists who are still in town have been riding together frequently, although it is not always smooth sailing. Mrs. Bradley's answer to an inquiry as to whether she had been bicycling lately was, "Oh, yes; I fell off just the other day"

Bicycle Group Gains Members

The sport is gaining popularity in the club, however, and 15 or 20 members have indicated their intention of taking it up next winter. Those who have been riding this summer are: Mrs. Hugh B. Johnston, Mrs. Victor Bihl, Mrs. Jack T. Irwin, Mrs. John B. Bowen, jr., and Mrs. Dan J. McKeithen. Several are now leaving for vacations, temporarily breaking up the group. Mrs. Bowen, with her husband and son, John 3d, will spend a week at Scientist's Cliffs, near Solomon's Island; Mrs. McKeithen, with Mr. McKeithen and their children, Jean and Dan, leaves Friday for the Carolinas, and Mrs. Bradley, her husband and her sister, Miss Billie Dotson, a senior in George Washington University, leaves Saturday for a motor trip to West Virginia.

Mrs. Morrison has just returned with Dr. Morrison from a two weeks' visit in North Carolina.

The Bethesda Club is one of the few in or near the District which has a clubhouse of its own. The picturesque little building, set in a background of trees, is not only a center for the club life but also is used for many community affairs. Its auditorium seats 500 and a long sun room adjoining serves as an attractive dining room for luncheons and dinners. The sun room has a large fireplace at one end and, at the other, are the doors opening into the kitchen. The auditorium has a stage and dressing rooms.

There is a flagged terrace outside the auditorium, at the back of the building, which was given by Mrs. Lily Stone, one of the active club members. She gave it in memory of Mrs. Sally Fontaine Perry, to whom a plaque is inscribed. The terrace is used in the spring and fall for bridge parties and occasionally for picnics.

The clubhouse was built 10 years ago and since that time the mortgage has been reduced by half. The site was paid for before the construction began. The club has taken an active part in the social welfare work of Montgomery County and 20 years ago established a scholarship loan fund which has helped many Montgomery County girls to continue their education beyond high school.

One Founder Still Active in Work

The club was organized in 1911 by seven women, Mrs. Evelyn C. Condon, Mrs. Eleanor T. Cronin, Mrs. Morris L. Croxall, Mrs. Charles Dickens, Mrs. Franklin C. Getzendanner, Mrs. Daniel Morgan and Mrs. E. Winson Offut. Mrs. Cronin is still active, and Mrs. Getzendanner an honorary member.

In Mrs. Elisha Hanson's term as president, in 1926, the club was incorporated for the purpose of erecting the clubhouse. The incorporators were Mrs. Earl Chafee, Mrs. Fred Imirie, Mrs. Hanson, Miss Mona W. Gill, Mrs. Eleanor T. Cronin, Mrs. E. C. Brandenburg, Mrs. Leonard Nicholson, immediate past president, and Mrs. E. P. Wilson. Mrs. Gibbon White was chairman of construction.

Present officers are: Mrs. Morrison, president; Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle, first vice president; Mrs. Ford Young, second vice president; Mrs. Jacob W. Bulger, recording secretary; Mrs. F. P. DiBlasi, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry J. Pirie, treasurer; Mrs. Edward M. Willis, historian; Mrs. Hanson, parliamentarian; Mrs. J. B. Hutson, director to county federation; Mrs. E. A. A. Dunn, Mrs. Frank Halliday, Mrs. J. J. Miller, Mrs. Lilly C. Stone, Mrs. E. P. Wilson, Mrs. Richard E. Titlow and Mrs. Leonard Nicholson, directors.

Departments of work include: American home, Mrs. Jacon B. Bulger, chairman; hospitality, Mrs Edward Garlock; applied education, Mrs. Kenneth Newton; conservation, Mrs. Charles A. Reed; motion pictures, Mrs. F. G. Kayhoe; scholarship, Mrs. J. J. Miller; literature, Mrs. Hugh B. Johnston; fine arts, Mrs. Leonard Nicholson; art, Mrs. Edwin H. Eix.; drama, Mrs. Ernest Offutt; music, Mrs. James Hammond; international relations, Mrs. George E. Pariseau; legislation and resolutions, Mrs. Lily C. Stone; press and publicity, Mrs. J. Reed Bradley; public welfare, Mrs. Frank P. Farley; hospitality, Mrs. Reginald B. Looker; social service, Mrs. Howard B. Richardson.

The standing committees are: Finance, Mrs. Edward M. Willis; rentals, Mrs. Richard E. Titlow; house Mrs. Edgar Hovet; grounds, Mrs. Elisha Hanson and Miss Doree Holman; membership, Mrs. Manning Dver.

ONE of the few women's organizations in or near the District to have a clubhouse of its own is the Woman's Club of Bethesda. The building, in its woodland setting, is shown above. At the right is Mrs. Edward L. Morrison, president for the coming year.

"MADAME CHAIRMAN"

TWELVE THOUSAND miles and home!

Marjorie Webster, president of the Women's City Club, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Jessie Webster, and Betty Sands and Marjorie Dunham of her school faculty, has just returned from a motor trip through the Southwest covering that distance.

They started from here the end of June and have been on the move ever since. On their way West they went through New Orleans and across the border into Mexico at Laredo. They spent three weeks in Mexico, stopping in Monterey and Valles, going over the Sierra Mountains to Mexico City and from there south to Taxco and Vera Cruz, in the orchid and gardenia country. The orchids were all of the brown and yellow variety, and were beautiful as they hung from the trees, said Miss Webster.

They returned by way of Pueblo, Mex., and visited, among other things, the tile factories there. The roads were perfect as far south as they went and they followed the same route by which they had gone to Mexico City, on their return to this country, as no other highway provided such smooth going.

* * * *

CARLSBAD CAVERNS, N. Mex.; El Paso and Phoenix, Ariz.; the Grand Canyon, the Arizona Desert and Los Angeles were on their itinerary. In Los Angeles, Miss Webster visited a former student, Mrs. Arthur Lange, who was Marjorie Joesting before her marriage. Her husband is musical producer for Fox, and under his guidance, Miss Webster and her party were able to see several of the large motion picture studios.

* * * *

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, which was their next jump from Los Angeles, was the high point of the trip in Miss Webster's opinion. Nothing else they saw in all the thousands of miles quite came up to it.

From there they went to Carmel and San Francisco, across Nevada to Reno; from there through Yellowstone Park and out the Cody entrance; through the South Dakota Black Hills to Rapid City and Sioux Falls and then over to West Salem, Wis.

In West Salem, Miss Webster renewed acquaintance with friends she had made as a child, when she went there each summer to visit her grandparents. Next on their touring map was McGregor, Iowa, where the Wisconsin River empties into the Mississippi, a section known as "the little Switzerland of America" and her mother's birthplace. They also stopped in Madison, where Miss Webster attended the University of Wisconsin, and in Chicago, which was her "home town."

Now she is back in Washington to stay for the rest of the summer—what rest there is—except for a trip Saturday to Sandy Cove with a party of Women's City Club members.

City Club President Returns

MISS MARJORIE WEBSTER, president of the Women's City Club, who has returned from a 12,000-mile trip to Mexico and the Pacific Coast.

New Club Will Continue Its Aid to College Students

The M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club of Washington, hardly six months old, now boasts 50 members, has established a scholarship fund which is already helping one girl through business college, and is preparing a yearbook to contain its program for the coming season.

Mrs. Eric W. Schwartze, who came here from Texas some years ago, is founder and president. The organization was formed March 2 of this year, the anniversary week of M. Eleanor Brackenridge for whom it was named.

Miss Brackenridge was long a prominent figure in the club world, and a leader in educational work in Texas. Her home was in San Antonio and, 40 years ago, she used to carry books in her surrey to the country schools of Bexar County. Last spring a $1,500 "bookmobile," traveling library of 1,200 volumes, was dedicated to her memory and placed in county-wide service.

Mrs. Schwartze, in 1909, as a student at the Texas College for Women, was responsible for organizing the first M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club at that institution. It grew and carried on work which included the establishment of a scholarship and a program designed to emphasize Miss Brackenridge's ideals of fiendship. Miss Brackenridge bequeathed $10,000 to the scholarship fund started by this student organization.

Mrs. Schwartze started the M. E. B. club here this year. Other officers are Mrs. Isaac Pugh, who came here from Georgia, vice president; Miss Louise Fincham, formerly of Virginia, recording secretary; Miss France Mestekin, of the District, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Glenn Crittenden, treasurer.

The club membership is restricted to 50 until November 1, but from then on will be unlimited. The plan is to have at least one member from every State in the Union and when any group of Washingtonians who have come from other sections becomes large enough it will form a State division of the parent club.

The club will promote, among other things, a national friendship day in memory of Miss Brackenridge, on March 7, her anniversary.

Among recent new members are Mrs. Lucius Latham, Mrs. Clay Maines, Miss Hilda Blanchard, Miss Mary Campbell, Mrs. Elyce Taylor, Dr. Anita Bowden; a young Japanese girl, Seikio Nichio; Mrs. Mary Ferris, Miss Aloise Bartlett, Kathleen Thorpe Couch, Mrs. Randolph Coates, Lynet Plumley Haskell., Mrs. Pen Howard and Mrs. Frank Mason.

Woman's Clinic Board to Meet

The board of the Woman's Clinic, which has not met in July and August, plans to resume its regular meetings the evening of September 12.

The clinic is open now three days a week instead of two, with Dr. Cecile Fussell present on Wednesdays from 10:30 to noon. Dr. Isabel Reith is present as usual on Mondays and Fridays. Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, treasurer of the board, also is hostess at the clinic which is visited by an average of ten women daily.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Sue and Sammy Want to Know.

Knowledge is for those who seek—
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit should have been over in the old sugar house in the Green Forest. Yes, sir, that is where Peter should have been, I mean he should have been there if he could have understood the English language, which of course he couldn't. You know how full of curiosity Peter is. Well, if he could have been there and could have understood what was being said he would have learned something that long has puzzled him.

"I think," said Sammy to the Old Naturalist, "that Old Mother Nature is rather stupid about some things."

"What for instance?" he asked, the laugh wrinkles gathering around his eyes."

"Well," replied Sammy, "when she has grown a set of big antlers for Lightfoot the Deer why doesn't she let him keep them? Why does she go to the bother of growing a new pair every year?"

"I've wondered about that, too," spoke up Tommy. "It always has seemed to me like a lot of wasted effort, not to mention making it mighty uncomfortable for Lightfoot all through the hot weather. And if it is uncomfortable for lightfoot the Deer what must it be for Flathorns the Moose when he grows a set of the tremendous antlers he wears."

The Old Naturalist smiled. "I've thought about that myself," said he. "I can recall when like you, Sammy, I wondered if Old Mother Nature wasn't a bit stupid about some things, this matter of growing new antlers every year for one. But when I began to really become acquainted with the Deer folk I began to see reasons why the antlers are taken away every winter and new ones grown through the summer. They may not be the real reasons but they are good enough reasons for me."

"Tell us what they are. Please do. If they are good enough for you they are good enough for us, so please tell us," begged Sue.

"Lightfoot's antlers are his weapones. When he has them all hardened and polished he feels pretty chesty. He wants to use them. He goes about with a chip on his shoulder, as they say, spoiling for a fight. He goes out of his way to pick a quarrel. It is partly because saving those splendid weapons he wants to use them and so goes looking for trouble. Nations are like that. When they have great armies and navies they are very likely to want to use them, and so we have wars. There is such a thing as being too well armed." The Old Naturalist's face was sober and in his eyes was a far-away look. He paused.

After a moment or two Sue ventured to remind him that he was telling them about Lightfoot the Deer and why each year he loses his wonderful antlers. The Old Naturalist smiled and the laugh wrinkles puckered around his eyes. "So I was, lassie,. So I was," said he. "As I said, "Lightfoot likes to fight for the fun of fighting. Also he likes to show off before Mrs. Lightfoot to win her admiration, and having won her to keep her.

"But Old Mother Nature knows that it wouldn't do to have this hot-blooded, hot-tempered fellow going about through the Green Forest looking for trouble the year around. It wouldn't do at all. And she knows that those unarmed do not go about seeking trouble. Instead they try to avoid it. So, having fought for and won a mate Lightfoot no longer has use for his weapons, and Old Mother Nature takes them away from him to keep him out of trouble himself and from making trouble for others.

"In the late spring and early summer Mrs. Lightfoot wants to be alone with her babies. It is better and safer for her and for them. It is better that Lightfoot should be away from them. So Old Mother Nature starts a new set of antlers to growing, and because these grow so fast, as they must be ready for next fall, they take much of his strength, and he feels so uncomfortable that he wants to be alone. So he goes off by himself where he can be quiet and undisturbed and those tender and sensitive antlers are less likely to be injured. So perhaps Old Mother Nature isn't really stupid after all."

"She's smart if you ask me," declared Sammy with conviction, to which Sue agreed.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CAVIAR: It's odd that the presence of so many Harvard men in the New Deal control towers hasn't alleviated more worries. Harvard turns out many liberals but few flaming revolutionists. Even Tommy Corcoran seems to some who know him to be less a revolutionist than a campus politician.

Anthony Eden . . . got his start

* * * *

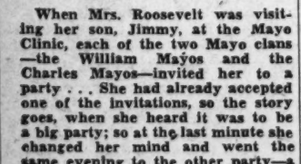

Harvard men in the Capital come in for a good bit of ribbing, as in the apocryphal story of what one-time President Lowell of Harvard said at a banquet for President Angell of Yale . . . Lowell told about the identical twin brothers whose mother couldn't tell 'em apart without pink and blue baby ribbon, and whose father finally sent one to Harvard and one to Yale.

* * * *

After four years (continued Mr. Lowell) the Harvard man was graduated, an urbane, polished, immaculate man-of-the-world . . . A typical Harvard man . . . His brother also graduated, said Mr. Lowell—"a typical Yale bounder."

"And still," resumed Mr. Lowell, "no one could tell them apart."

"—the street of broken dreams"

A Boston wit has suggested that the name of Commonwealth avenue be changed to Via Dolorooseveit, to signify the great love of his Harvard fellow alumni for the President . . . (You remember, of course, Via Dolorosa, the Road of Agony).

* * * *

Another difference between a statesman and a politician is that a statesman reads a book occasionally; politicians know the voters, statesmen know history . . . Even in the historic air of Washington I doubt that one politician-statesman in five reads a book a year; he prefers to fly like Corrigan, by the seat of his pants.

* * * *

I don't like to ask the impossible, but I do think every politician, down to the precinct committeeman, should read at least one book a month . . . Between now and Christmas every politico should read (1) the five-volume state papers of Franklin Roosevelt, (2) Jerome Frank's "Save America First," (3) Harry Scherman's "Promises Men Live By," (4) Jim Farley's new memoirs, and above all (5) Walter Lippman's "The Good Society." . . . (A few of 'em, I think, may read Jim Farley's book.)

* * * *

When Mrs. Roosevelt was visiting her son, Jimmy, at the Mayo Clinic, each of the two Mayo clans—the William Mayos and the Charles Mayos—invited her to a party . . . She had already accepted one of the invitations, so the story goes, when she heard it was to be a big party; so at the last minute she changed her mind and went the same evening to the other party—a small one.

"—so began Tony's career"

If August passes without dumping a world war in our laps, high-minded, Homburg-hatted Anthony Eden may yet visit our country—perhaps as ambassador, if he can spare a year or two from his career . . . Apropos of this career, a story is floating around the summer parties here, about its beginning . . . One evening Eden, as a young man, was dining at the palace.

* * * *

Next to him sat a great lady, wife of a lofty cabinet official, who was eating too much, a little greedily . . . After stuffing herself through several courses there finally emanated from her stomach a loud, rumbling noise which has no place at the modern English dinner table . . . Instantly Mr. Eden pushed his chair back, rose and clicked his heels, bowed and said:

"Please excuse me, I fear I have overeaten," and walked away.

Everyone at the table assumed it was Eden . . . A few days later the lady's husband offered him an important diplomatic job.

WHITE HOUSE OVAL ROOM: Even in his aircooled office the President had his coat off and hanging on the back of his chair . . . Not so much cooling turned on as formerly . . . A light blue bow tie, cooler than a four-in-hand . . .

Asked for a definition of the New Deal, he referred an inquirer to Volume 3 of his published works—$15 for all five volumes . . .

* * * *

Best line of the day: When he said he had been invited to all 48 States, including Vermont and Maine, a rear row voice asked: "Who invited you to Maine?" . . . The President replied it was his mother—who has a place at Campobello . . .

* * * *

In his statement on the primaries he referred to himself in the third person, "Franklin D. Roosevelt." It turned out the statement had originally been an editorial, and he had let the name stand unchanged.

Mosquito Horde on War Path; Health Squads Counterattack

Battle Carried to Enemy's Lair on Anacostia Flats, Where Oil Sprays Eliminate Pests in Larval Stage.

The pesky Washington mosquito, a first cousin to the little scourge of New Jersey, is on the war path again.

In southeast Washington along the banks of the Anacostia River, in the 14,000 catch basins of the city and in the swank neighborhoods of Chevy Chase the dread disturbers of peaceful citizens have mobilized squads and are on the attack.

Equipped with latest types of mosquito fighting weapons an army of WPA workers, under supervision of the Sewer Department Mosquito Control Division and the United States Public Health Service, has taken the field and daily is causing havoc in the mosquito ranks.

Breed in Water.

Recent rains have created many ponds in the Washington area and it is in them that the mosquitoes have gained some headway.

Contrary to the belief of many persons, mosquitoes breed only in water, and only during the summer months, usually from April through October or until the first heavy frost.

Chief concern of the control division is to destroy all bodies of standing water by drainage and clean all slowly moving streams, or to treat the surfaces of such areas with oil at regular intervals.

Uncovered recently by the control division was the breeding place of swarms of mosquitoes which had raided the southeast section of the city.

Using the facilities of the Weather Bureau in determining the direction of the wind at certain times of the day, and the number and types of mosquito collected in the mosquito traps, the experts were able to find the breeding place.

It was found to be the Anacostia flats, behind the city dump yard.

Traps Are Set.

Usually it does not take the experts but a day or two to find the breeding grounds, but at other times it may take as long as two weeks.

In determining the exact location of the breeding places in Southeast Washington one of the electric mosquito traps was installed in Lincoln Park. In the trap is an electric clock, fixed so the mechanism will automatically operate between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m.

A small electric light attached to the top of the mechanism attracts the mosquito. Directly under the light is a suction fan which draws the mosquito into the trap and instant death from cyanide gas, generated in a jar beneath the fan.

By checking the direction of the wind, the inspector, making the rounds each day, is able to determine the direction from which the mosquito entered the infested section.

Nine similar traps are in the city, one on the White House Grounds. Control workers are trained in the identification of the different types of mosquitoes and are instructed on the breeding habits of each.

Control activities are restricted to destroying and oiling areas on public or unimproved private property. The larvae, known as wrigglers, can not live after immersion in the oil.

Private Sources Many.

However, John J. Harold, supervisor of the control division says there are doubtless thousands of areas on private premises containing tin cans, buckets, tubs and other such containers found in back yards, sewer and areaway gratings, and ornamental fish and lily ponds, many of which have not been discovered, due to a limited inspection force.

Such conditions can and do contribute great numbers to the musquito population, and at times seriously hamper control.

"There are many ways in which the public can be of great assistance in helping keep down mosquito breeding in the city," Harold said. "First do not permit water to collect on premises, either in low places in the ground, in cellars, or in artificial containers. Second, do not permit breeding in fish or lily ponds."

Now, if there was a pesky little mosquito humming about your bedroom last night and you can't find out where he lives, or his breeding place, call the control division at National 5710, branch 426, or write to Interstate Sanitary District No. 2, U. S. P. H. S., Room 1083, Navy Building.

Tariff Aides Placed Under Civil Service

Merit System Extended to Commission's Technical Staff.

Move Designed to Hold and Attract Trained Specialists.

The Tariff Commission yesterday swung into line with the Executive orders of June 24—which extend the merit system in the Federal service—by placing practically all of its expert personnel in the civil service.

"The commission seeks by this action to strengthen its ability to attract and hold those of high qualifications and special training in the difficult field of tariff economics," the statement explained.

The commission said it was convinced that it could obtain from the civil service registers the type of employes heretofore appointed directly.

All the expert staff of approximately 140 is affected, including commodity specialists, economists, accountants and specialists in international commercial policies. Of the group, 72 per cent have been in the service of the commission more than five years. Nearly 30 per cent had qualified under civil service and worked elsewhere in the Government before coming to the Tariff Commission, the statement pointed out.

Under the arrangement, the professional employes may be transferred to other Federal agencies under civil service, an avenue not previously open to them.

Exceptions are temporary expert consultants for positions expressly excepted in the act creating the commission, namely, the secretary to the commission and personal secretaries of the commissioners.

Following the commission's announcement, Charles I. Stengle, president, American Federation of Government Employes, requested the Social Security Board, the Federal Trade Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Maritime Commission, to take similar action.

Health Officials Approve Plans For Gallinger

More Conferences to Be Held on Improvements Costing $1,325,000.

District health officials tentatively approved plans for a $1,325,000 improvement program for Gallinger Hospital yesterday following a conference with Municipal Architect Nathan C. Wyeth.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, pointed out, however, that the plans were incomplete and that other conferences with the architect would follow.

The improvements will consist of a $750,000 medical ward building and a nurses' home and ward building combined to cost $575,000. Money for these projects will come from the Public Works Administration, which recently approved $6,000,000 for local projects.

Plans and archiectural drawings for the hospital program were studied at yesterday's meeting by health officials, members of the District engineer's office and the municipal architect.

Full Smithsonian Cubbyholes Show Current Camera Craze

Pigeonholes, Old Table Now Both Filled by Kodaks Checked With Guards Who Sometimes Lose, Sometimes Profit, by Mistakes.

The best barometer of the current camera craze is a row of pigeonholes in the Smithsonian Institution.

The pigeon-holes stand at the entrance to the Arts and Industries building. A guard is on duty all day long, repeating monotonously, "Check your camera, please!" as the sightseers throng past. One by one the pigeon-holes fill up. At the end of an average day as many as 2,000 cameras sometimes have been checked in and out.

The Smithsonian never has allowed cameras but not until this year did it have to install a camera checkroom. According to Guard Ruffian Brantley a table in the guard room, beside the umbrella and cane stand, always has sufficed for the half-dozen kodaks which would accumulate during the day.

But last year the cameras started overflowing. Seven months ago a double row of pigeon-holes, accommodating 80 cameras, was erected. Still the cameras multiply. Lately, Brantley says, he has been piling the overflow on the old table. When that's completely covered, he just lets the photographers pass unmolested, after warning other guards throughout the building that a lot of contraband cameras will be on the loose that day.

Opinion seems to be divided as to the reason for the rule against picture-taking. Some say it's the same as for umbrellas—careless visitors will swing them around and break glass cases. Another theory is that many of the exhibits are not the property of the institution and therefore institution officials lack the right to authorize photographs of them.

A more fantastic explanation was offered yesterday by one guard who believes the rule protects the institution from a plague of unauthorized bulletins. "People could come in and spend a day or so taking pictures and then publish them in a fake catalogue," he declared. Permits to photograph exhibits may be secured by persons who can give good enough reasons.

The guards are very conscious of the responsibility of watching the cameras. Sometimes, when the collection includes several imported models and a movie camera or two, Brantley estimates its total value at $5,000.

Wily sightseers occasionally cost the guards large sums of money. A man will hand the guard his check, accept a camera in exchange and walk away before the unsuspecting guard realizes he has handed out the wrong camera. To pacify the indignant minicam owner who finds a $2 box camera awaiting him, the guard must pay the difference in price, Brantley said yesterday.

Sometimes they profit by the job, though. An absent-minded photographer occasionally leaves his camera behind. After six months, the camera becomes the property of the guard who checked it.

Brantley has found, however, that minicam owners have very good memories.

Gas Company Ordered to Cut Rates $53,360

The Pulic Utilities Commission yesterday ordered the Washington Gas Light Co. to reduce rates to 2,300 commercial consumers $53,360 during the next year.

Also affected by the order are 20 wholesale apartment house customers, whose monthly minimum rate of 75 cents will be reduced to 65 cents.

The new rates which result from the company's sliding scale, will go into effect on all bills rendered after September 1.

Domestic consumers of gas will not benefit from this year's reduction because of the small amount of excess profits over the company's basic rate of return of 6 per cent.

Commercial consumers listed under Schedule C will receive a $52,470 saving of the total amount. The rate remains the same under the new schedule for the first 9,100 cubic feet of gas per month.

For the next 90,000 cubic feet per month, the rate was reduced from 6.5 cents per 100 cubic feet to 6.1 cents. For the next 900,000 cubic feet the rate was reduced from 5.8 cents per 100 cubic feet to 5.4 cents.

The commission also ordered the company to provide free service connections to gas mains, provided property is 125 feet or less from the main.

Two other men were booked on similar charges when taken into custody in an alley rear of the 400 block O street northwest. They were Isham Parker, 45, 100 block P street northwest, and Beverly Broadus, 49, first block of T street northwest.

Park Meters Go on Streets In September

D. C. Officials to Test All Machines Before Letting Contracts.

District officials yesterday opened 12 bids from seven parking meter manufacturers that ranged from $28.25 to $65.

Bids were found to be in order and, barring unforeseen delays, officials said contracts will be let in time to permit installation of meters not later than September 30.

The Park Rite Corporation, of Houston, Tex., submitted the lowest bid, $28.25, for a semiautomatic meter. The amount was $28.25 per meter.

Last month the first attempt to select a company to supply Washington with parking meters for a year's trial, as provided by Congress, was stymied when complaints, involving at least one United States Senator, prompted the District Commissioners to return bids unopened.

One Automatic Meter.

One bid was for an automatic parking meter. This contraption costing $52.50, relieves the parking autoist of the manual labor of winding up the clock after inserting the coin. On the semiautomatic parking meters, and there were 11 bids on this mechanism, the autoist turns a lever, thus winding the clock.

The Park Rite Corporation, lowest bidders, also had bids in for three other machines, highest amount being $32. Next low was bid by the Michaels Art Bronze Co., with a price of $29.30 per meter.

The Graybar Electric Co., sole bidders on the automatic type, also bid for the semiautomatic type with a price of $42.50.

To Test Machines.

Other companies bidding were the Duncan Meter Corporation, who placed the highest bid of $65 per machine; M. H. Rhodes Co., $29.95; National Park O-Graf Corporation, $58, and the Standard Meter Corporation, who placed two bids, $48.75 and $59.75.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said yesterday machines from the various companies would be tested to determine whether they come up to specifications listed by the special parking-meter committee.

Symphony Dancer To Defy the Heat, Wear 3 Petticoats

Heat or no heat, Carola Goya, Spanish dancer, will wear three petticoats tonight when she performs at the sunset concert of the National Symphony Orchestra. Miss Goya explained that she wears all the petticoats for artistic purposes.

A native American of Spanish descent, Miss Goya studied the dance in Seville. She believes, however, that the Hollywood influence is changing the traditional Spanish type of dancing. Even the Spanish, she explained, are trying to appear the kind of people that the motion pictures show them.

Conductor at this evening's concert will be Francis Garzia. Miss Goya is scheduled to give six numbers at the event, the last of the sunset symphonies at the Water Gate.

Inquest Is Called In Death of Girl Shot in Md. Home

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 17.—A special inquest will be held this week in the fatal shooting of Frances E. Bowers, 13, of Pinesburg, Md., killed when a cocked shotgun in the hands of her mother went off.

The woman, Mrs. Susie Bowers, 34, rushed to the window with the .12-gauge gun when she observed three men approaching the house, a half mile off the highway, fearing that they might be prowlers. She was alone with Frances and another daughter at the time, Monday night.

Recognizing the trio as soldier friends, she turned to let them in. The gun went off, mortally wounding the girl. She was rushed to Washington County Hospital by the three soldiers, stationed at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. She died yesterday.

The girl's father, William Bowers, 64, will complete a 90-day jail term Sunday. He had been convicted on a charge of illicit relations with the slain daughter.

Zoo's Pig-Tailed Monkey Pair Are Proud Parents of New Son

Wrinkled Little Newcomer Finds Climate Resembling His Ancestors' Own East Indies; Couple of Side-Winder Rattlesnakes Also Arrive.

A baby with a wrinkled face peeped out from behind his mother's arms for the first time yesterday and found the world a very hot place indeed—almost as hot as the tropical East Indies, where he would have been born if his parents hadn't been brought to Washington by the National Geographic Society-Smithsonian expedition of 1937. "He's a pig-tailed monkey, born early yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. P. T. M.

In the East Indies, pig-tailed monkeys are kept on leashes by the natives and trained to pick coconuts. They are not used for that purpose at the Zoo.

Sharing the limelight with the Zoo's youngest inhabitant are a pair of strange newcomers, just received in a snake-and-lizard shipment from a California schoolboy. They're a couple of poisonous side-winder rattlesnakes.

It sounds like the snake equivalent of a fish story, but Zoo authorities solemnly insist that the side-winder wriggles over the desert sands obliquely instead of straight ahead.

The young California collector, Wesley Feagin, of Long Beach, also sent the Zoo three leaf-nose snakes, whose strange protuberance helps them burrow in the ground. Once thought extremely rare, the leaf-nose is now believed to be fairly common in southern and Lower California and southwestern Arizona, but is seldom found in collections.

Feagin also sent the Zoo nine other snakes native to the Southwest, including gopher snakes, garter snakes, a kingsnake and a two-lined racer, which, as his name implies, is a fast-moving reptile with a couple of lines down his back. There's also one snake in the group which the Zoo's herpetologists haven't yet been able to identify.

Together with the snakes, Feagin sent the Zoo a few lizards, including scaly lizards, a rock lizard and a coleonys, which, just to make things clear, is something like a gecko.

The only death to balance the new acquisitions in the reptile house is the demise of a leaf-backed toad, from West Africa, also somewhat rare in collections.

Never Saw Perfect Football Team, Says Baugh, Lauds College Stars

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.
(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

I've played on and played against some great football teams. But I've never yet seen the perfect football team.

Last December, at the Polo Grounds, the Redskins probably looked more like the perfect football team than any team in the history of the game. We left the field at the end of the half with a 28-0 lead over the New York Giants. We were doing everything right. We were running through a powerful Giant team as if they were high school boys. Our passing was clicking and they couldn't make a first down.

SAMMY BAUGH.

We were feeling pretty pleased with ourselves when we went into the dressing room between the halves. Four touchdowns against the Giants in 30 minutes wasn't bad. Bad? Criminny, that was wonderful. Or so we thought.

But we had that notion knocked out of our heads right away. If you could have listened to Coach Ray Flaherty between halves, you'd have thought we were four touchdowns behind. To hear him tell it, we had spent that first half out there making mistakes. And the funny part about it, he had all our mistakes tabbed. We should have had six touchdowns instead of four.

* * * *

I think the squad that has the makings of the perfect football team is the College All Stars, the team the Redskins play at Chicago on August 31. If that team could be kept together as a unit, it would come closer to being the perfect football team than any other.

There isn't a coach in our league who wouldn't swap his club for the College All Stars—gladly. And I think the coach that took the All Stars would win the pro league championship with 'em.

Nobody in pro football is underestimating that outfit. You can't, very well, after looking at the record of the four all-star-professional games at Chicago. The best the pros could get out of the four games was one win and one tie.

It isn't such a big jump from a good college football team to a regular job in the pro leagues. That is, it isn't as big a jump as trying to make the grade with a big league baseball team. I know. I was a pretty fair baseball player in college. But when they started curving 'em at the Cardinals' training camp, I found out I wasn't a big leaguer—at least, until two or three years hence.

* * * *

But college football is more nearly on a level with big league football. And that All-Star College team has got everything. It figures to be the team without a weakness. The only edge the pros will have is that of experience, plus the cohesion that comes from playing as a unit.

But if a coach could take that College All-Star material and whip it into shape and send it into the pro league as a unit, by the end of the season I think he'd have the perfect football team and the winner of the championship. Fellows good enough to be on the all-star team must have football sense. They'd pick up those little tricks of the pros plenty fast.

I'd be willing to bet that the college all-star team I played on last season against the Green Bay Packers (we beat 'em, 6-0, remember?) would have won that pro league title if it had been able to go into the league as a unit. We had the makings of a better football team than any club I saw in the pro league last season.

* * * *

Don't get me wrong, though. I don't mean that college football is up to pro football. It isn't. The best pro team could lick the tar out of the best college team. But when the collegians begin to gang up on a pro team with an all-star outfit, that's a different story. The only way to get a true line on the colleges vs. the pros would be to let the collegians play an all-star team against an all-star team of pros. Let the pros make up a team from the best players in the entire league. Then you'd have something. That pro team would lick the college boys.

We're going to have experience on our side in that Chicago game on August 31 and you can't discount that. One of the things I learned last year in my first season with the pros was how much football I had forgotten to learn in college. The pros think ahead of the college boys.

I remember two distinct cases when the Redskins turned two bad situations into long gains last year because I had experienced men back there with me in the Redskins' backfield.

* * * *

We were playing Pittsburgh in Griffith Stadium one day and we needed a touchdown bad. And we weren't getting there very fast. They were rushing me plenty and I wasn't having such hot luck with my passes. I got backed up on one pass and it looked like a 15-yard loss for us. I couldn't spot a receiver anywhere and was in plenty of trouble. And then I heard Riley Smith shouting. Riley wasn't supposed to take a pass on that play, he was blocking for our ends. But he saw I was in trouble and he didn't bother to block. He left his man, got himself clear and yelled to me. I got that pass away to Riley for a 25-yard gain to the 5-yard line. A college boy wouldn't have gotten me out of trouble as Riley did.

And there was many a play in which Cliff Battles saved me a loss. He blocked for me and if he got his man, well and good—I had plenty of time. But when he didn't have his man blocked off, Cliff was the first to know it. He wouldn't waste time trying to recover. He'd yell and take many a short pass from me for a good gain on a play which originally was intended as a long pass down the field. Those things just don't happen in college football.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Without attempting to sermonize, we are dwelling this morning on the increased frequency of pop bottle-throwing episodes at Griffith Stadium, the most recent of which occurred yesterday as you may have heard.

By this time, it's fairly well established that bottle-throwing is a cowardly act. The editorial columns have been crammed with condemnation of the bottle thrower. We have been told that he is a type. He has been pictured as a cringing coward who wouldn't stand up to a plate of jello in a fair fight. He has been painted as a sneak who depends on his refuge among the anonymity of the crowds to get in his dastardly work.

POVICH.

And there isn't much defense for the bottle thrower, if any. When he rises in his wrath, or perhaps his pure cussedness, to heave a bottle at a player or an umpire, he is hurling a missle of potential death at a defenseless figure. At best, the bottle heaver is a guy who doesn't stop to think if, perchance, he has the capacity.

But in one sense, bottle throwing is something of a tribute to baseball. It is evidence, however distasteful, that the game has a tremendous grip on certain of its fans. In a sense it is their fanatical zeal for the game that prompts an irate fan to lose his self-control, his sense of sportsmanship and develop downright vicious tendencies following an unpopular act by a ball player, or a close decision by an umpire.

Even Strong and Silent Men.

And we are sorry to destroy the illusion, but the bottle thrower is not always the inhibited little fellow who satisfies his repressions by an act of viciousness safe in the knowledge that his target has no come-back. The bottle thrower has long been pictured, as we were saying, as a suddenly enraged Caspar Milquetoast. But that is not quite true.

Because we have seen strong men . . . strong and silent men . . . built for combat and apparently willing for it, suffer themselves to the point where they have grabbed a pop bottle and chucked it at an errant player or umpire. It is not a weakness peculiar to the little guy who gets the vicarious satisfaction of starting something. In these cases, the bottle thrower may be ordinarily a sane, fair-minded fellow simply transported by his rage of the moment.

To understand the bottle thrower, we must understand the terrific grip baseball has on some people. Their act is unpardonable, of course, but baseball is a game that can apparently produce temporary cases of insanity among the customers. It is very possible that the same fellow who could very calmly look down the barrel of a six-shooter in the hands of a thug will lose his head over what he thinks is a bad decision on the baselines or intentional roughness by a ball player. Baseball does some things to some people.

That Brooklyn Incident, for Example.

Not so many weeks ago, the ultimate happened in Brooklyn. Brooklyn fans have long been known as perhaps the most zealous in baseball and thus it could happen there. We refer to the occasion when a Brooklyn fan, twitted about the shortcomings of his Dodgers, hauled out not one, but two, revolvers and shot two of the hecklers dead.

And St. Louis was the scene of two famous bottle-throwing episodes. Back in 1921, or i may have been 1922, Whitey Witt, outfielder of the Yankees, was beaned by a bottle thrown at him by a St. Louis fan and suffered a cracked skull. The St. Louis club maintained that Witt was the victim of a freak accident—that he stepped on the neck of the bottle and that it flipped up, hitting him on the head. Which is a swell trick if you can do it without trying.

But the absolute tops in bottle-heaving, according to the legend, if it is no more than that, occurred in St. Louis on the day that a New York baseball writer, following a game with the Browns, began typing his story with these words: "The St. Louis Browns, resembling a sandlot team, today were . . ." He never finished the story. A prying St. Louis fan, peering over the writer's shoulder, noted the disparaging beginning and brought a pop bottle down on the poor fellow's head.

Washington's siege of pop bottle episodes is something quite new in the history of local baseball. It is of very recent vintage for these eyes, in 15 years of observation at Griffith Stadium, never saw a pop bottle thrown until four or five years ago. We had read of such sequences in other league cities, but Washington, somehow, seemed beyond the pale of bottle throwing.

The Johnson Influence, Perhaps.

In fact, Washington fans had a reputation for being notoriously well-behaved. Perhaps it was the influence of Walter Johnson. Like Johnson, Washington fans were content to suffer in silence and without recourse to vicious acts. Perhaps local fans patterned their behavior after Johnson's. At any rate, there was a great kinship and perhaps something of an analogy.

But there is evidence that a change has taken place in the fiber of Washington fandom. Griffith Stadium in the past two years has been the scene of more thrown bottles and probably more booing than any park in the league. There are players who are unfailingly booed in Washington—Jake Powell, Buck Newsom, Hank Greenberg, Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Joe Cronin, for example. Not the loud, friendly boos fans had for Babe Ruth, but the angry, vicious boos to which they subjected Powell yesterday.

It's a new kind of Washington fandom. They are no longer tolerant. They are demanding winning baseball. The transformation was much the same in Boston before Yawkey. Boston fans, their own team hopelessly in the ruck, paid chiefly to watch and applaud the exhibitions of visiting stars. But with the coming of Yawkey, Boston fans went strongly on the scent of a pennant and demanded winning baseball.

Incidentally, Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, did not distinguish himself as the possessor of any great judicial mind yesterday. He might have been wiser than to start Jake Powell in the Southernmost city in the league in the first game that Powell played since being suspended for disparaging remarks about the colored race in a radio interview. In Washington, unlike other league cities, colored fans are congregated chiefly in one sector of the park. They could have been expected to work up a fury against Powell. They did, too, Powell's return to the Yankees' line-up might easily have been delayed until the Yankees were in another park.

Budge Wins In 2 Matches At Newport

Wins Without Loss of Set; Kovac Defaults, Victim of Heat.

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16.—Don Budge, rated as the world's outstanding amateur tennis player, today staked his claim on his third consecutive Newport casino title by breezing through two competent rivals to gain the round of 16.

Budge, who arrived a day late, thereby missing yesterday's terrific heat, opened his campaign for his third leg on the casino's historic trophy by marching through Robert Low, of New York, for a 6—2, 6—2, victory.

His booming forehand drives against that aggressive youngster were slightly off line, but he corrected that fault, the only one noticed in his extensive armory, when he was called upon to face Owen Anderson, of Los Angeles, who bowed by a 6—0, 6—3 margin.

Budge, out of singles action since he returned from his highly successful European invasion, appeared to be close to the top of his game, and being so, he seemed assured of retiring the casino trophy next Saturday.

While Budge coasted into the fourth round, second seeded Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, kept pace with him by defeating Frank Shields, tennis' gift to Hollywood, by a 3—6, 6—1, 6—3 margin. Frank Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., gained such a bracket yesterday and today he was joined by Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., who was seeded fourth, and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., who was ranked next on the casino's domestic list.

Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., sixth seeded, became the third victim of the heat this morning, when he was forced to default to William Murphy, of Chicago, after the latter won the first set at 6—2, and had three games to one lead in the second.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, ranked next in the draw, had an easy time getting through Robert Kamrath, of Austin, Tex., 6—3, 6—1.

The two remaining seeded players, Gene Mako, of Los Angeles,

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 16.—The Brooklyn Dodgers landed on Harry Gumbert and Dick Coffman in the ninth inning today, got five hits for four runs to beat the Giants, 7-to-3, and thus gained their first victory of the year at the Polo Grounds and their second in 12 meetings with the Terrymen.

The defeat, coupled with Pittsburgh's victory, dropped the Giants five games behind the league-leading Pirates.

Goody Rosen was the Dodgers' hitting hero with three singles. His second put him in position to score the tying run in the eighth, and his third drove in the two runs in the ninth that broke the deadlock. Buddy Hassett's single brought in the final two tallies. Ernie Koy's eighth homer, with Gilly Campbell on base, accounted for the other Dodger scoring.

Gumbert's defeat was his tenth of the year. Vito Tamulis, who pitched no-hit ball for two and two-thirds innings after relieving Luke Hamlin, got credit for his seventh victory.

George Myatt, young third baseman brought up yesterday from the Giants' Jersey City farm, fielded smartly and got one hit, a drag bunt, in three trips to the pla . Mel Ott, who returned to his old post in rightfield, went hitless.

New York, Aug. 16.—Geared up by an additional week's training, Lou Ambers and Henry Armstrong will settle their dispute for Lou's lightweight championship in a 15-rounder in Madison Squire Garden tomorrow night.

Originally booked for the Polo Grounds last Wednesday night, the fight was postponed and transferred indoors when a downpour of rain drenched 5,000 spectators just as hostilities were about to begin.

Had the fight gone on it would have been a financial, if not an artistic flop, but Promoter Mike Jacob tells you it will be a different story when the two little champs charge into each other in the Garden.

"Already we've sold more ringside and $11.50 seats than we sold for the Polo Grounds," said Mike today. "The pasteboards are moving today and I look for a crowd of 19,000 and a gate of aronud $100,000.

Can Claim Crown.

Other estimates placed the gross receipts at nearer $70,000 or $80,000. Jacobs has the big arena scaled so that a sell-out would bring in a gate of $130,000.

Armstrong, holder of the featherweight and welterweight crowns, will be bidding for his third ring title in less than a year when he goes after Ambers. If successful, he'll be the first man in boxing history to accomplish this feat.

Although the New York State Athletic Commission has repeatedly ruled that only Ambers' 135-pound crown will be at stake, it is believed that if the New Yorker upsets the dope and beats Armstrong decisively, he'll lay immediate claim to the crown Armstrong recently won from Barney Ross.

Armstrong Strong Favorite.

To stifle reports and to give Armstrong as much protection as possible, the commission today called in Promoter Jacobs and Managers Eddie Mead and Al Weill and had them sign an agreement specifying that the fight is for the lightweight championship and that no other title is at stake.

This is o be appended to the original contract which merely called for the boys to punch it out for the lightweight honors.

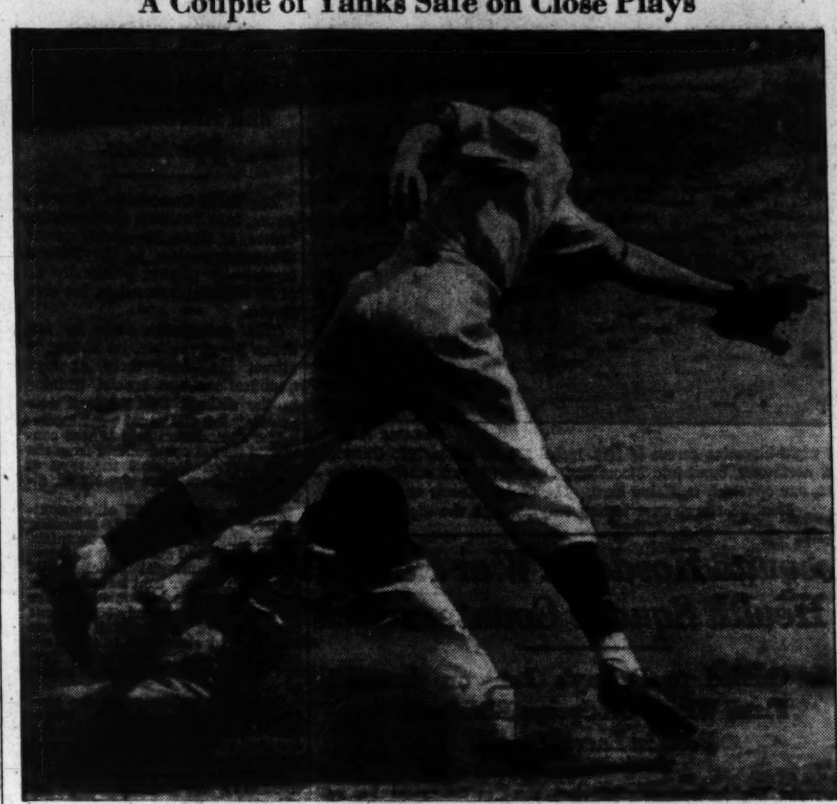

Armstrong, a knockout winner in 35 of his last 38 fights, remained a steady favorite at 3 and 3½ to 1. There is little or no wagering. Largest single bet reported was Al Jolson, the comedian, laying $1,100 to $1,000 that Armstrong wins by a knockout.

The layoff appears not to have affected the fighters adversely. If either is the worse for it, it probably is Ambers, who was reported in the top shape of his fighting career last Wednesday. There have been rumors from Summit, N. J., that Lou may have a little weight trouble, but these were laughed off by Weill. Ambers weighed 134 after his last drill Monday.

Bucs Shake Slump, Beat Reds, 10-0

Cy Blanton Hurls Steady Ball to Win; Rizzo Hits Twice.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 16.—The tiring Pittsburgh Pirates called out the reserves today, shook themselves out of a slump and behind steady pitching of Cy Blanton whitewashed Cincinnati's slugging Reds, 10 to 0.

The triumph boosted the Buccaneers' margin to five full games over the second-place Giants, who lost to Brooklyn. The Bucs' enthusiasm had shown signs of waning recently as they suffered four defeats in the past five games, which led Manager Pie Traynor to bench Capt. Gus Suhr and Catcher Al Todd.

Bill Brubaker, taking Suhr's job at first base, slammed out three hits in four trips, including a home run over the leftfield fence with one on during a six-run flurry in the third.

Johnny Rizzo, who took over the cleanup notch which Suhr had occupied in the batting order, collected two singles and then retired from the game because of the heat—taking with him a mark of six successive hits including four in a row yesterday.

Twelve Pirates trotted to the plate in the third inning, when Brubaker got his homer and Lee Handley and Arky Vaughan made triples. Manager Bill McKechnie elected to keep Ray (Peaches) David in the box during the barrage, until he forced in the sixth run with a walk.

Big Jim Weaver, former Pirate, then relieved Davis and held his old mates scoreless until the eighth when Blanton and Handley singled and little Lloyd Waner brought them home with his fourth homer of the season, a 430-foot blow inside the park.

Blanton had the once rampant Reds helpless with one hit for five frames, but the visitors began nipping at him in the sixth and filled the bases on three hits in the ninth before he chopped off the rally.

Red Ruffing, Gomez Yield 6 Hits Each

McCarthymen Fall on Griff Hurlers for 14 Blows in Opener.

By Shirley Povich.

Amid intermittent showers of Yankee base hits and glistening pop bottles—both of which descended in great profusion—the Nats labored through five frustration-filled hours of baseball yesterday. Before 25,000 fans, a record week-day crowd for recent seasons, the Nats could produce only a double defeat for themselves, 16-1 and 6-2.

Most of the Yankee hits were provoked by inept Washington pitchers in the first game. Jake Powell provoked the pop bottle shower in the late innings of the second contest.

Powell, a veteran target of pop bottles in the hands of Washington fans, was playing in the Yankee line-up for the first time since two weeks ago, when he was suspended for disparaging remarks toward the colored race in a radio interview.

Boos Just Preliminary.

His appearance in the second game was greeted with loud boos. But with their boos the fans apparently were merely warming up for their later demonstration.

The first pop bottle was thrown from the stands in the first inning when Powell drew a base on balls. When he returned to his leftfield post in the sixth inning, a veritable bombardment of bottles was loosed by the bleacher fans.

Gomez, Ruffing Effective.

It was a dismal afternoon for the Nats, who succeeded in making only three runs off the combined pitching efforts of Lefty Gomez and Red Ruffing, each of whom went the route for the Yankees despite the sizzling heat.

Between games Umpire Bill McGowan, who officiated behind the plate in the opening contest, fainted in the dressing room and required first aid by the Washington Club physician. He returned to officiate on the bases in the second game.

For the Nats and the 25,000 shirt-sleeved customers there was only one measure of balm—the pitching of young Joe Krakauskas in the second game. After his rookie southpaw colleague, Ken Chase, had been batted out in four innings in the first game—Krakauskas went to the mound in the second contest and gave a dazzling display despite being charged with the loss.

Krakauskas Fans Ten.

The broad-beamed Krakauskas, turning loose all his speed, worked seven innings before he was relieved by a pinch hitter and compiled 10 strikeouts. In every inning he fanned at least one Yankee, and in

Ferrell to Hurl Today; Leonard Will Be Foe

With a complete disregard for Clark Griffith's opinion of Wesley Ferrell as a pitcher, Manager Joe McCarthy announced last night that he would send Ferrell to the mound against the Nats today.

Released outright by the Nats last week, and signed immediately by the league-leading Yankees, Ferrell thus will be making his first start in a Yankee uniform against his former mates.

Informed several days ago that the Yankees had signed Ferrell and planned to pitch hi mi nthe series against the Nats here, Griffith declared: "I hope they do. The Yankees will have to score 19 runs to win the game Ferrell pitches, because we figure to get 18 runs against him."

Ferrell will have as his pitching opponent today Emil (Dutch) Leonard. It will thus be a duel of slow-ball pitchers, with Leonard's knuckler pitted against the creeping curves of Wesley.

The 25,000 fans who saw the Nats take a double licking from the Yankees yesterday constituted Washington's greatest week-day crowd in several seasons. Reserved seats were at such premium that Senator Pat Harrison and District

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 16.—The British bombshell:

Shipping along North River was completely disorganized and distant skyscrapers swayed from the explosion when Capt. Gerald Balding, of the 1939 British polo team, declared: "We're out to win that cup next year!"

CUDDY.

Mr. Balding released this detonation when he stepped off the gangplank of that sea palace, the Normandie.

"We're tired of moral victories," he said. "We want to do more than make a good showing next June. It's all very well to play hard and lose like good sportsmen and all that, but we've had enough. It's time we won that cup again."

Balding was referring to the International Polo Challenge Cup, which the British haven't held since 1921.

His statements were so revolutionary that they were simply staggering, my Deah Abernathy! They positively violated all conceptions and traditions of the British "sporting thing" as handed down from generation to generation. Even little Egbert Throopwhistle in the lowest form at Eton knows that "the game is the thing" and not the winning of it.

• • • •

We somewhat uncouth Americans have hewed to a different interpretation of the "sporting thing" ever since the colonial days when one would have his scalp lifted if he didn't win each and every encounter with whopping, face-painted and feather-bedecked opponents. Merely make a "good showing" didn't count much against the Indians in those days. You had to win, or else——. In a large sense that philosophy still holds true in our sports.

We moderns express it in this fashion: "They don't pay off on losers." At times many of our individuals and teams have gone a bit too far in trying to win. They did things that weren't strictly cricket. But we also have an expression that at times more or less excuse such violations: "You can't blame a guy for tryin.'"

Meanwhile, although Americans have been puzzled at British interpretations of sportsmanship, and vice-versa, sportsmen of both brands now seem to be approaching a mutual understanding. In fact the British at last seem to figure that there may be something in the American philosophy, after all.

• • • •

This trend toward the American viewpoint was somewhat disturbingly illustrated last June at St. Andrews, Scotland, when the British golfing amateurs wrested the Walker Cup from the United States for the first time. It seems that the British brass hats of golf tired of losing to Uncle Sammy's lads. They investigated and discovered that British amateurs were just as good shot-makers as the Americans, but they didn't seem to have the determination to win under pressure. So they started a new system of amateur tournaments where the amateurs got plenty of experience under fire and absorbed the determination to win. Thus in June they licked us with our own guns.

Now comes Mr. Balding with the admission that John Bull is out to win at polo also. Mr. Balding not only revealed this new determination but also what steps the British players of hockey on horseback are taking to win. In the first place, 14 ponies of international caliber already have been shipped to Long Island to be used by Balding and Eric Tyrrell-Martin in the United States open championship next month. These steeds will remain here and be perfectly acclimated before next year's international play. Later this fall 40 more British ponies will be sent to California for training throughout the winter season.

• • • •

In addition Balding is going to India immediately after the Meadow Brook season to search for more topnotch polo mounts. He said, "The Indian princes out there, who are great judges of polo horseflesh, have promised that they will lend us the finest ponies of their strings."

It seems that the British polo-lists are leaving no hoof unturned even on the "road to Mandalay" to beat the Americans this time. So watch out—Winston Guest, Tommy Hitchcock and Co.—the British lion is roaring. Remember what happened at St. Andrews

Bowers and Leapley Advance in Rock Creek Golf

Axtell Bows In Thrilling 19-Hole Test

Kelly Defeats Halloway; Defaults Mar Play in Champion Flight.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Bobby Bowers and Bill Leapley paced the favorites into the second round of the Rock Creek Mid-summer Tournament yesterday, Bowers defeating Muny Junior Champion Gail Holmes on the last green while Leapley went to the nineteenth to oust Pat Axtell with a curling 20-foot putt.

Defaults marred the play in the championship flight, George Graham and S. Loeffler, jr., defaulting to Joe Rodgers and George Nealis, respectively. Harold Kelly won by a 4-and-3 margin over Lloyd Halloway in the most one-sided match of the top flight.

Bowers and Holmes were never more than one hole apart, turning the first nine all even and were still all square playing the final hole, the ninth on A course. Here Bowers hit his tee shot on the edge of the green, chipped close and dropped the birdie putt for the victory. They scored 74s for the round.

Anne Dolan, club employe, won over Bobby Coleman in a second-bracket-encounter by a 3-and-2 margin.

Bowers faces another test today in young Joe Rodgers, while other quarter-final matches pit Leapley against Thomas Cook, Kelly against Larry Byers and George Nealis, who lost in the medal playoff, against Ray Loy.

Results in the three flights and pairings for today:

Championship Flight.

Second Flight.

Jimmy Anderson defeated Bobby Rands, 1 up; Anne Dolan defeated Bobby Coleman, 3 and 2; James Patterson defeated Bobby Brousseau, 1 up, 20 holes; L. Liebman defeated E. Smith, 4 and 3; Eddie Hutchinson defeated Phil Dean, 3 and 2; Dick Chattman defeated J. S. Walsmith, 1 up; Dick Gentry defeated R. H. Kirchmyer, 5 and 4; Eugene Fling defeated Zeke Wilder, 4 and 3.

Third Flight.

Pairings for Today.

Pitchers

Commissioner George Allen were forced to sit in an aisle.

Yankee base stealers sprinted 1.000 against the Washington catchers. Four of 'em attempted to steal second and all four succeeded.

Wes Ferrell, seated in the shade of the Yankees' bullpen during the first game, was dealt an unkind cut by a wise-cracking bleacherite. With the Yankees in the midst of their nine-run inning and Elon Hogsett just having pitched a two-bagger to Rolfe, the bleacherite, pointing at Hogsett, shouted to Ferrell:

"Hey, Wes, there's your double out there!"

Incensed by the increasing frequency of pop-bottle throwing by Griffith Stadium fans, Clark Griffith yesterday announced that soft drinks in bottles would not be sold at his park in the future.

"All drinks will be served in paper cups," said Griffith. "Whereas I believe that the chances of a player being struck by a pop bottle are slight, the bottle throwing constitutes a nuisance. As soon as the concession stands can make the change, all bottles will be barred."

Low gross went to A. G. Dezendorf, Washington Golf and Country Club member, with an 82.

Playground Title to Nunez

Keeps Senior Net Crown; Bensinger Wins Jr.

Mike Nunez, the Western High School student who represents Palisades Park in the Department of Playgrounds tennis tourney, yesterday retained his senior championship with a clean-cut 6—2, 6—0 victory over Arthur Abel, of Georgetown. The broiling sun failed to slow the hard-hitting Nunez, who hit his strode halfway through the first set and sailed through the second without loss of a game.

A new champion was crowned in the junior division, in which Bob Bensinger, of Takoma, defeated Bud Edwards, of Burroughs, 6—4, 6—1, to take the title. Bensinger also was late getting started, but once he hit his peak he was too much for the Burroughs lad. Both matches were staged at Chevy Chase Playground.

Nunez used an effective forehand drive, combined with a sharp service, and completely outclassed Abel in the senior encounter. He is predicted to be one of the outstanding young players in the city with more experience.

Giants Recall Myatt To Play 3d; Shift Ott

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The New York Giants, to make room on their roster for George Wyatt, third baseman recalled yesterday from Jersey City, today took Rookie Catcher Harry Krause off the active list and appointed him a coach. Krause is a Purdue University graduate.

Myatt played third base for the Giants today against the Brooklyn Dodgers, with Mel Ott returning to his old spot in right field.

Taft-Burroughs, Powell Win Playground Softball Crowns

Beat Hamilton, 4-3, and Sherwood, 5-2, Respectively; Both Games Go Extra Innings.

After Walter Johnson made an underhand delivery in throwing out the first ball, Johnson-Powell came up with 2 runs in the ninth to defeat stubborn Hamilton, 4 to 3. Taft-Burroughs also was forced into extra innings to beat Sherwood, 5 to 2. The winners broke a 2-to-2 tie in the eighth, shoving across 3 runs.

Paul Sapourn pitched for Johnson-Powell and yielded Hamilton eight hits, one a homer by Sam Heller with two out in the ninth. In the seventh Hamilton threatened to win the game within the regulation time when it got men on first and third with none out. Sapourn, however, arose to the occasion and retired the side in order, striking out one batter and forcing a man at home after scooping up a ground ball.

Johnson-Powell scored its winning runs on Sapourn's single, a bunt which he beat out; 2 errors and Brown's squeeze bunt.

"Chocolate" Cake was the winning pitcher for Taft-Burroughs. He allowed but two hits. Newby, Walsh and Newsome paced the winners at bat with two hits each.

Washoe Valley Sets Track Record in Cumberland's Feature Race

Speedy Filly Wins Year's Fifth Purse

Odds-on Choice Never Headed; Maolissa Equals Mark.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fair Grounds, Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16.—Washoe Valley, a 3-year-old chestnut daughter of Tarpaulin and Valley of the Moon, backed into 1 to 2 favoritism by a crowd of 9,000, provided a great thrill when she raced five-eighths in the new track record of 0:54 1-5 to land the Herbert R. O'Conor Purse.

The race, named in honor of Maryland's attorney general, who viewed the event from President-General Manager Harry A. Manley's box, saw Washoe Valley win by eight lengths after leading from flag fall to wire. It was her eleventh start of the year and her fifth victory. She paid 1 to 2 to win, the same second and only 5 cents less on a dollar third.

Following the race, O'Conor, who is a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, presented Owner Bill Kendrick, of Charles Town, W. Va., with a handsome trophy.

J. M. P. Bell's Maolissa equaled the five-eighths track record of 55 seconds in winning the opener. It was the fastest race ever turned in by a 2-year-old over this course.

Eddie Colvin's Canter Belle in breaking her maiden defeated a smart field in the 6½-furlong second. Coupled in the daily double with Maolissa, she paid $47.

The 6½ furlongs of the third saw Mrs. Helen Horst's Golden Key overcome the fast early pace of J. W. Thompson's Xmas Carol to win and bring joy to the form players, who have been finding it rough at this meeting.

Stepping out of the gate ahead of seven opponents, John White's Cora Kay easily remained in front to win the 1 1-16 miles of the fourth. She paid $10.50.

Esposa Is Winner At Saratoga.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP).—William Ziegler, jr.'s, mare Esposa, which stood flat-footed in her stall when the break came in the recent Merchants and Citizens Handicap, was on her best behavior here this afternoon. Despite the terrific heat and humidity, there was nothing sour or sulky about the disposition of the 6-year-old daughter of Espino on this occasion and she easily outran the field in the thirty-sixth Champlain Handicap to win by three lengths.

Richard Moore's lightly weighted Piccolo got up to head William Woodward's Isolater out of second money. Three lengths farther back came Rust, followed by Galsun, Gentle Savage, Regal Lily and Rex Flag.

The talent made Esposa favorite, but they evidently were pretty wary of the mare, for she paid the surprisingly good odds of 16 to 5 and was quoted as high as 7 to 2 at one stage of the betting. The Ziegler veteran was 13 to 10 when she was left last time, chiefly because she had finished a bang-up second to War Admiral in the Saratoga Handicap not long before.

Esposa ran today's mile and a furlong in 1:50 3-5, which is only three-fifths of a second slower than Sun Briar's track record, established in the 1919 renewal of the Champlain.

Natty Boy Triumphs At Narragansett.

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 16 (AP).—The form players took a drubbing at Narragansett Park today as Hall and Warrender's Natty Boy became the first public choice of the day to win when he annexed the Colchester Handicap, fifth and feature race, to pay $6.70 to win.

Before entering the winners' circle, however, Natty Boy had to step the fastest 6 furlongs of the current meeting, the timers catching him in 1:10.3 for the distance.

Two lengths away was the H. and H. Stock Farms' Panther Creek that paid $11.60 to place and staged a great stretch run to take down second money.

Klein's Blow Defeats Bees

Philadelphia, Aug. 16 (AP).—Chuck Klein's single off Milt Shoffner in the eleventh inning scored Hershel Martin from second with the run that gave the Phillies an uphill 7-to-6 victory over the Boston Bees today.

Martin had opened the inning with his fourth hit, a single, and was sacrificed to second by Phil Weintraub.

Tony Cuccinello's two homers off Al Hollingsworth and his single off Pete Sivess in the ninth with the bases full put the Bees ahead, 6 to 5, going into the last of the ninth. With two down, however, Martin doubled and Weintraub tripled to force the game overtime.

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—Cleveland set down the last-place St. Louis Browns, 9-6, today and gave Mel Harder his tenth victory of the season.

Sammy Hale's home run with the bases unoccupied in the fourth paced the Indians' 12-hit attack on Les Tietje, Ed Cole, Russ Van Atta and Buck Newsom. Tietje was the loser.

Billy Sullivan, former Indian, delivered three singles to lead the Browns' attack.

Handicapping Contest Is Ruled a Lottery

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—The Post-office Department today struck a blow at the patrons' handicapping contest in which horse bettors at Washington Park have attempted to select seven consecutive winners for prizes ranging from $1,000 to $5,000.

Ernest J. Kruetgen, postmaster, notified Chicago newspapers that news of the event was a lottery and unmailable.

Pimlico Race 'Ringer' Was Uallno, Vet Says

Gelding Ran as Bye Bye Will, Dr. Collins Tells Md. Commission at Hearing.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 16.—A horse which ran under the name of Bye Bye Will, and won the first race at Pimlico on May 7, was identified late today by Dr. William P. Collins, Washington veterinarian, as being in reality a chestnut gelding named Uallno. The identification was made at a hearing before the Maryland Racing Commission.

The hearing was called following an investigation by the stewards of the Pimlico spring meeting, the Maryland Jockey Club operating Pimlico and the commission itself into the possibility that Bye Bye Will did not run and win the first race on the above date but that another horse was substituted.

Dr. Collins provided the meat of the hearing when he testified under oath, he examined the horse which ran as Bye Bye Will immediately after the Pimlico race and that he found no similarity to the horse which was pointed out to him as Bye Bye Will on the Cambridge, Md., farm of M. R. Schwartz a few weeks later.

Collins further testified that during his investigation he went to Belmont Park, examined a number of horses and that one of them was marked exactly and appeared to be the same horse he examined after the Pimlico race. This horse, Collins declared, was identified to him as Uallno, trained by Thomas Malone.

Malone, who was present at the hearing, made vigorous denial that Uallno was substituted, claiming that he had shipped Uallno from Belmont to Jamaica for a workout before a prospective buyer and that on the day of the Pimlico race, Jockey Gilbert "breezed" Uallno at Jamaica.

At this point the commission introduced a statement from Gilbert relayed by Steward Marshall Cassidy, of the New York tracks, that he (Gilbert) did not ride Uallno in workout that morning. An affidavit from Gilbert on the subject was reported in the mails to the commission.

Bye Bye Will, according to the official records, won the first race at Pimlico on May 7, paying $31.60 to win, $14.40 to place and $7.40 to show. It was a 6 furlong race for maidens and Bye Bye Will scored by several lengths, whereas previously the horse had failed to get close in two years of racing.

The Maryland Racing Commission is expected to announce its findings and any possible rulings in the Bye Bye Will case on next Tuesday.

Bill Bennings ... at the Post

Selections at Cumberland.

Dear Al:

It looks as though Mrs. Bennings' lovely boy didn't waste any time stepping into the win column. We chased home four winners and two of our second horses won, which stamps me as better than a greenhorn or darned lucky. I want to thank the sender of that verse "Bill Bennings won't you please come home." Sorry I couldn't supply Cumberland badges to some of the Benningites who sent in stamped envelopes, but I'm holding them and possibly I can send some passes to some track in the future. I notice Esposa won at Saratoga. She is getting to be a "problem" horse, here today and nowhere tomorrow. If she belonged to Joe Dokes she probably would be ruled off. Cumberland's crowds and betting are running about 25 per cent off last year, but the caliber of horses is noticeably better. Virtually every stable here is shipping to Marlboro for the Prince Georges County meeting opening next Tuesday. Washoe Valley may be seen in action many times this fall on the main Maryland tracks. The filly, winner of five races this year, is improving despite the fact that she burns oil every time she goes to the post. She can't go much over 5 furlongs now, but she is growing and may yet make her mark as a 6-furlong filly sprinter. She will have to operate in good company, however, because she's going to be claimed the first time she starts in a cheap race anywhere. I haven't any sympathy for Jockey Laurin, who was suspended probably for life at Narragansett Park for possessing a battery. Laurin probably will never get a chance to pilot a horse in a race again. The fact that he had a battery indicates, however, that he was going to try to win. Laurin hasn't Col. E. R. Bradley behind him to get him reinstated as was the case with Don Meade. Meade, in my opinion, was the worst offender. He was betting on other horses and pulling his mounts. Putting Meade back in the saddle is like rehiring a bank teller after he has served time for embezzlement.

BILL.

First race—Adhelmar needs only to run back to that last to take care of this company. I see no reason for mistakes. The Trout is a fair sort and looks like the runner-up. Happy Marlene for the minor money.

Second race—Monologue seems well placed in this field. Has plenty of foot now and seems capable of turning back Veritas. The latter likes the course. Leah Fern prefers a fast track and if the oval remains firm she might take it all.

Third race—Miss Bones is a cheap filly, but she has been showing good form in the morning and deserves a chance to step home in front of these. Travelo and Morning Flight are in-and-outers at best and should be in the money circle.

Fourth race—Royal Business favors the route and promises to do a lot of running. I'm going to string along. Mahi's last was encouraging and earns this one second pick. Schley Nurse lacks a little of the class of the top pair, but should be prominent.

Fifth race—Helen Bab has earned several purses over this track during her career and is reported fit and ready. Penway is a fair sort in good hands and is dangerous. Best Policy's last was a beaut.

Sixth race—Sea Finn continues to hold to best form and seems ready to pick up another set of brackets in this company. Machilla and Day Letter to account for the place and show.

Seventh race—Justa Pilgrim should get to the front of these and stay there. Famous Clayton is a tough campaigner and promises to go well. Cartour for the minor pay.

3 Unknowns Win Upsets; Bundy Bows

Mme. Mathieu Among Beaten Net Stars in Essex Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 16.—Startling upsets by a pair of unseeded San Francisco girls, and Nancy Wynne, 21, of Australia, featured today's play as the fourteenth annual Essex County Club Women's Invitation tennis tournament moved into its quarter-finals round.

Such highly favored stars as second-seeded Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif.; Mme. Mathieu, champion of France and top-seeded foreigner, and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, third ranking foreigner, went down in the wave of upsets.

It was Margaret Osborne and Virginia Wolfenden who proved the "giant-killers" of the day, Miss Osborne defeating the famed Mme. Mathieu, 6—0, 3—6, 6—4, and Miss Wolfenden defeating Mme. Henrotin, 7—5, 6—1.

Miss Wynne earned her place in the quarter-finals with a win over Miss Bundy, 5—7, 6—2, 6—2.

The other seeded stars advanced as expected.

The eighth quarter-final berth will be filled tomorrow by the winner of a second round match between Mrs. Johnny Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., fourth seeded, and Miss Thelma Coyne, of Australia, sixth-seeded foreigner.

Mme. Mathieu Favorite.

It was expected Mme. Mathieu would rout the comparatively inexperienced Miss Osborne, but the French champion was all but swept off the court as the former National Junior champion of two years ago broke service three times and won the set at love.

Miss Osborne fell into errors on the second set attempting a series of tricky drop shots and the match was all even before she recovered. They fought game for game in the final set and it wasn't until they stood 4-all that Miss Osborne broke Mme. Mathieu and went ahead to lead for the first time. She carried her next service to win, clinching the match with an ace.

Miss Bundy was figured for a victory over Miss Wynne, but the Australian girl flashed the greater hitting power. She repeatedly passed Miss Bundy on speedy placement drives and her service was as fast as that of a man.

Stammers Gives Scare.

Miss Kay Stammers, of England, was on the brink of defeat as Miss Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., won the first set, 6—3, but as they stood 5-all in the second set, Miss Pedersen suddenly wilted from the heat and all but gave up the rest of the match.

Three of the quarter-final matches will be played tomorrow, with Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., top seeded and tournament favorite, facing Miss Wolfenden; Miss Wynne facing Margot Lumb of England, fourth ranking on the foreign list, and the third seeded Mrs. Marshall Fabyan of Cambridge, meeting Miss Osborne.

England's Kay Stammers, second seeded foreigner, will meet the winner of tomorrow's Van Ryn-Coyne match on Thursday.

and Sydney Wood, of Beverly Hills, Calif., who delayed their arrivals until today, defied the torrid heat to catch up with the more prompt arrivals. Mako was forced to battle his way through three opponents, and Wood, aided by a bye, overcame two rivals to gain the fourth round.

Only one of the eight foreign seedings, Yvon Petra, of France, survived the second day's play. Petra won the two matches, to become one of the last 16, but Charles Hare, of England, who topped the foreign group, encountered the capable Hal Surface, of Kansas City, in a third round match, and bowed out, 6—3, 6—2.

Among the other foreign casualties was the veteran Jacques Brugnon, of France, who won his opening match and then droped an extra match to Gardner Mallow, of Miami, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

GOMEZ.

At the ball park . . . It wasn't so much the heat but the humility that bothered the Nats yesterday . . . Imagine Lefty Gomez making a hit! . . . and he wasn't even trying . . . The Yanks weren't running out their grounders after the fourth . . . The Nats weren't running at all . . . They didn't have to, they just popped up or struck out. . . . One of the prize baseball laughs of the seson was provided in the fourth of the opener, when Harrris ordered Hogsett to intentionally walk DiMaggio and pitch to Gehrig . . . When last seen the ball that Gehrig knocked over the rightfield wall was heading for Florida at an awful rate . . . Looking at the sweltering fans in the lower boxes you wondered how many had left air-conditioned offices to sit and suffer from the twin agonies of sun and a Brooklynese exhibition by the Nats . . . Flash Gordon, the Yanks' second baseman, showed all afternoon why he is called the best rookie of the season . . . His triple, a fearful wallop, landed in the centerfield angle and he made two over-the-shoulder, back-to-the-infield catches that were nothing short of miraculous.

"Your other reader" writes in to say that Glenn Wagner, 275-pound running guard on the Illinois eleven that made Red Grange famous, or vice versa, is supplying the pulpit at the Wallace Memorial Church each Sunday in August . . . He will leave at the end of the month for a seminary in Dallas to further his study for the ministry . . . Cletus Elwood Poffenberger is clamoring loudly to get back into the majors . . . He's won three straight for Toledo . . . Note to L. R., the instant a fielder drops a foul fly he's credited with an error. Anything that occurs on subsequent pitches is scored accordingly. If batter hits safely he's credited with a hit . . . Hack Wilson, whose 190-runs-batted-in record for the majors probably never will be broken, is playing with the Tube City Brewers, semipro outfit of McKeesport, Pa. . . . Charles (Jeff) Tesreau, Dartmouth baseball coach and former ace pitcher of the New York Giants, and his son, Charles Francis, are suing a New York sports writer for $150,000 damages . . . The suit grew out of the New York scribe's magazine story, "Not So Hot Off the Gridiron," in which he allegedly charged the Tesreaus with intemperance.

And just 10 years ago today, the Browns beat the Nats, 7-2, in seven innings . . . Denny Sothern, former Washington sandlotter, slammed a homer, triple and 2 singles for the Phillies as they beat the Reds, 13-4 . . . Alonzo Stagg celebrated his 66th birthday and prepared at Chicago to coach his 36th football team.

Robert to Meet Ernie Dusek If He Downs Emil Tomorrow

The possibility that Yvon Robert, one-time Montreal blacksmith, college athlete, and later Bowser circuit wrestling champion will meet Ernie Dusek later in the season for the American title loomed large last night. All the handsome French-Canadian has to do is hurdle Emil Dusek tomorrow night at the Arena.

There had been talk of Robert tangling with Cliff Olson, bad boy of the league who has been creating a disturance in this locality lately, but Promoter Joe Turner declared that out last night. Turner remembered that Robert broke a leg and lost his championship to Olson in a bout at the ball park two years ago and is certain Yvon will not sign for another match with the Swede.

Ernie Dusek, a reformed eye-gouger, seems to have won a host of fans to his banner by his clean and efficient wrestling in the last two shows. The crowd was with him to a man last week when he lost a hotly disputed match to Steve Casey via the disqualification route.

It was with him two weeks ago when he stretched Olson, and probably will stick by him as long as he continues the new-fangled clean tactics.

Meanwhile, Turner has completed tomorrow night's supporting card. Abe Coleman, who made a hit last week, tangles with Ed Newman in a 30-minute setto. Ed Meske engages a newcomer, Steve Budyniss, and Bibb McCoy, who won the Battle Royal last Thursday, squares off with Jack League. The first bout is at 8:30 o'clock.

Boyd's Bout To Top Card

All - Heavyweight Show Planned for Monday.

An all-heavyweight card, featuring Jack Dempsey's recently discovered gem in the rough, Bill Boyd, is being plotted for Monday night's fight menu at Griffith Stadium, it was revealed last night.

The matchmaker is endeavoring to sign a suitable opponent for Boyd, whom Dempsey predicts will be the next champion of the world. Bob Pastor, Georges Bfescia, Steve Dudas and Buck Everett have been offered the match, but have been in no hurry to reply.

Boyd is credited with 21 consecutive victories since turning professional. He is of the old school of boxing, the same take-two-punches-to-get-one-in class to which Dempsey belonged. He knocked out Bob Nestell, sensational Pacific Coast youngster, in one round; flattened Sandy McDonald in two, and Floored Hans Birkie several times while on his way to a victory over the stolid Dutchman.

Ahearn prefers Pastor as an opponent if he can be obtained, for the former New York University football star has compiled an enviable record and is fairly well known in Washington, but will take whoever he can get since Boyd's reputation preceded him in the East, and the big fellows aren't in any hurry to test his punching power.

Meanwhile, Emergency Hospital authorities reported George Abrams, who suffered a spinal injury in his bout with Steve Mamakos Monday night, resting comfortably. What was feared to be a serious injury may not be as bad as a cursory examination revealed, and some hope is maintained that George will be able to enter the ring again after a long rest. His back has been taped up and it may not be necessary to place it in a cast.

Macks Beat Bosox, 14-11

Shell Bagby and 2 Mates for 15 Hits to Win.

Boston, Aug. 16 (AP).—The lowly A's fell on "Young Sarge" Jim Bagby for five runs in the first inning today, eventually scorea nine times more and beat Boston's Red Sox, 14-to-11, before a slim perspiring gathering of 1,800 persons.

Bagby gave way to Emerson Dickman who in turn was replaced by Dick Midkiff, who yielded five runs in the sixth.

Ace Parker drove in four of the Athletics' runs and Frank Hayes belted two singles and a home run.

Jimmy Foxx, Boston's first baseman, who has been hitting poorly for several days, revived today and knocked out his thirtieth and thirty-first home runs, bringing his runs batted in total to 113.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington ost will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Zeke Bonura held the lead in the Man of the Month contest yesterday when he picked up three points for his play in the double-header with the Yankees. The points were distributed as follows:

To Joe Kraukauskas, five points, because he struck out 10 Yankees in the seven innings he pitched in the second game, and allowed only two untainted runs.

To Cecil Travis, four points, because he singled for one of the Nats' six hits in the first game and doubled twice, making two of the Nats' six hits in the second game.

To Ossie Bluege, four points, because in the first game he singled, doubled and walked in four trips to the plate, making two of the Nats' six hits and driving in the only run the Nats made off Gomez.

To Taft Wright, three points, because in the first game he doubled in his only trip to the plate and scored the Nats' only run.

To Zeke Bonura, three points, because he hit a homerun to give the Nats' a lead in the second game.

To Buddy Myer, one point, because he tripled in the second game for one of the Nats' six hits off Ruffing.

The Score:

Zeke Bonura	23	Sammy West	7

'Skins Defy Heat; Given Hard Work

Hartman's Style Earns Flaherty's Praise; Club at Banquet Tonight.

Driven relentlessly under a merciless sun that sent thermometers soaring to 96 degrees and wrung bucketfulls of perspiration from their brown bodies, the Redskins yesterday staged their first scrimmage of the season at Ballston, Va., where they are preparing for the All-Star battle August 31, at Chicago.

Tongues parched, bodies literally baking in heavy pads and headgear, the Tribesmen spent a good hour on contact work, with full operations in the lines. Secondary defense was restricted to touch-tackling and once in the clear ball carriers were called back. Coach Ray Flaherty emphasized line work yesterday, but today everything goes.

Ice and Salt Aid.

So intense was the heat Assistant Coach Roy Baker had to pass around salt tablets, lemons and cracked ice. Most of the players sucked on the ice or a lemon between plays. Some wrapped told towels around their drenched heads in an effort to alleviate their distress. Flaherty, however, took no pity on them, but kept them moving at top speed for he wants to prune the squad after Sunday's intra-squad game, and is pointing the men for the engagement.

Bill Hartman, former Georgia halfback, who is bidding for Cliff Battles' old post, caught Flaherty's eye yesterday with his speed and elusiveness. He looked good but claimed to be under par, as well as below normal weight. He weighed in at 185 pounds, but claims 190 ponds as his normal playing figures.

Flaherty to Cut Squad.

By sundown Sunday Falherty hopes to know pretty well who will stick with the club throughout the season, and will lop off the first batch in an effort to get down closer to the 30-player limit which goes into effect immediately after playing the first league game. Forty-one players are on the roster at this time, and two, Andy Farkas and Roy Young, have yet to report. Farkas is with the All-Star squad in Chicago and will join his future teammates there, while Young is in Dallas, Tex., with the Southwest All-Stars, and will return with the Redskins after they play there Labor Day night.

Tonight "Redskin Night" will be celebrated at the Shoreham with the festivities getting underway promptly at 9 o'clock. The program will be aired over a national hookup.

Nats

Three of the five runs he allowed were tainted affairs.

That first game was an ordeal for the Nats. It blew up in their faces in the fourth inning when the Yankees scored nine runs in one uproarious uprising. It was the Nats' most miserable inning of the season, containing as it did only four Yankee hits, two bases on balls, a pair of wild pitches and a fumble.

Lefty Gomez, who held the Nats to four lonely hits, was cruelly cheated out of a shut-out when the Nats produced a run with two out in the ninth. Taft Wright whacked out a freakish double and scored on a single by Ossie Bluege to deliver the Nats from the ignominy of a shut-out.

Chase Driven Out.

The Yankees blasted out 16 hits against the pitching of Chase, Elon Hogsett and Appleton in that first game. Chase was batted out during that large fourth inning when the Yankees came up with nine runs to place the game beyond reclaim.

DiMaggio drew a walk and Gehrig doubled to left scoring DiMaggio. Selkirk walked and Chase advanced both runners a base with a wild pitch. Joe Gordon singled to right center, scoring Gehrig and Selkirk. Gordon stole second. Appleton relieved Chase. Glenn grounded to Lewis, whose throw to the plate to catch Gordon was late and all runners were safe. Gomez popped to Appleton in an attempt to bunt. Crosetti's grounder was fumbled by Lewis. Rolfe doubled to left center, scoring Glenn and Crosetti. Hoag struck out. DiMaggio was given an intentional pass. Gehrig was given an unintential homer, his drive clearing the right-field wall. Recapitulation: Four hits, nine runs, one error.

Nats Decline Singles.

In the second game, Red Ruffing, like Gomez, held the Nats to six hits. But, strangely, all of the Nats' hits were for extra bases. They didn't stoop to singles, although on several occasions, singles would have come in handy.

Briefly, the Nats showed in front in that second game. In the second inning Zeke Bonura led off with his thirteenth home run of the season—a blast into the centerfield bleachers, with none on base.

The Yankees caught up with Krakauskas in the third inning after he had struck out a pair in each of the first two. Red Rolfe dragged a bunt down the first baseline and Di Maggio pounded a double against the leftfield wall that tied the score at 1-1.

Krakky, who had struck out seven Yanks in the first five innings, and then led off the sixth by striking out Gehrig, encountered a triple by Dickey on his next pitch. Then he got two cruel breaks. Buddy Myer's throw to home on Selkirk's grounder was late and Dickey scored from third. Selkirk stole second and scored when Gordon's bounder took a freak hop over Lewis' head and the Yanks had a 3-1 lead.

They had a 5-1 lead after the first two Yanks took their batting turn in the seventh. Powell's grounder was muffed by Travis and then Di Maggio banged his twenty-third homer of the season into the left-field seats.

Nats' Fans Saved Ticket Trouble by Parking Warning

Baseball fans went on a "parking spree" at Griffith Stadium yesterday and a warning over the loud-speaker system was the only thing which prevented a wholesale confiscation of cars by Second Precinct police.

Placidly watching final innings of the first Nat-Yankee game, motorists were admonished over the speaker system to "move their illegally parked cars or police would impound them." There was a rush for the gates.

"We didn't ask that the announcement be made, said Lieut. C. J. P. Weber, Second Precinct, "but it's a good thing it was. Those people just parked without any thought as to what they were doing—they parked anywhere, in front of alley entrances, in the alleys, in front of garages, by fireplugs . . . every place where there was a vacant space."

There was no unusual number of tickets issued and no cars were impounded, said Weber. The warning did the trick.

Shipping Firm Charters Line Owned by U. S.

Moore & McCormack Will Operate Republic Ships to South America.

The United States Maritime Commission announced yesterday that its American Republics Line, operating three luxury liners and ten cargo vessels to South America, had been chartered to the Moore & McCormack Co., Inc., which offered the highest rental.

The three liners, which will be operated by the Government for three months before they are turned over to Moore & McCormack Co. in January, are intended to enhance this country's prestige in Latin America, where Germany and Italy are using some of their best passenger ships in their "peaceful penetration."

President Roosevelt conceived the idea of establishing a better and speedier service to South America. The chance to carry out the idea came when the Panama Pacific Line abandoned its service between New York and San Francisco and turned over three liners—the California, Virginia and Pennsylvania—to the Maritime Commission as part of a debt settlement.

The ships are being reconditioned and will be put into service October 1 amid a fanfare of good will publicity in this country and in Latin America. They will ply between New York and Rio de Janiero and Santos, Brazil; Montevideo, Uruguay and Buenos Aires, Argentina. North bound, they will call at Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, in announcing acceptance of the Moore & McCormack bid, said that the new service represented "one of the most important steps in cementing the good will, trade relations and a better understanding among the citizens of North and South America."

The 10 freighters, constituting the largest unit of the Government-owned fleet, now ply between virtually all ports on this country's eastern seaboard and ports on the east coast of South America.

Moore & McCormack will pay the Maritime Commission $36,000 a month for the 13 vessels.

Woman, 72, Ends 16 Months' Work For U. S.-Unpaid

Miss M. Grace Wilmarth, 72, stopped working for the Government yesterday, 16 months after receiving her last pay check.

Retired in April, 1937, as a chief scientific aide in the Geological Survey, Miss Wilmarth worked without pay, keeping regular office hours to finish a 2,3961page book on which she had labored for 30 years.

"President Roosevelt gave me a year's extension after I was 70," she explained. "But the proofs came back when the year was over and I simply had to finish the book myself. It was drudgery at times, but I enjoyed it."

Yesterday she had sent to the printer final proofs on her work, a two-volume "Lexicon of the Geologic Names of the United States, including Alaska," and was planning a vacation trip to Bermuda.

Jump in Corn Lifts Wheat After Slumps

Both Grains Drop to 5-Year Lows Before Sharp Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 16—Almost 3 cents a bushel sudden soaring of corn values in Chicago late today helped to hoist the Chicago wheat market 2⅛ cents. Sharply contrasting were dips earlier to new 5-year low-price records both for corn and wheat.

Corn made its abrupt jump owing largely to trade uneasiness that developed over unusual scantiness of Chicago supplies of the cereal. Arrivals of corn here showed rapid dwindling to only 64 cars today, and stocks on hand totaled but 2,333,000 bushels.

The transient setbacks of wheat and corn prices were ascribed to doubts expressed in various quarters relative to Government grain policies in the United States and Canada alike. On fractional declines, however, especially after new low-price records had been reached, buying of futures increased, with corn becoming the leader at the last on account of acute scarcity of offerings.

Chicago corn futures closed 1½-2⅞ cents above yesterday's finish, the lightest level attained, September, 53¼-53½; December, 49⅜-49½. Wheat, 1⅝-2⅛ up; September, 62⅜-62½; December, 64⅜-64½. Oats, ¼-⅜ advanced, rye showing 1⅝-1⅞ gain, and provisions 7 to 27 cents bulge.

Ford Opening Is Expected to Hire 37,000

That Number to Be Back by Close of Week, Observers Say.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 16.—Resumption of operations by the Ford Motor Co. after a two weeks' shut-down gave impetus today to what observers in the automobile industry assert is an upturn in factory employment in the Detroit area expected to reach its peak within the next month or six weeks.

By that time all automobile plants should be in production on their 1939 models with a potential market for a large volume of replacements aided by a sharp reduction in used car accumulations and what should amount to a shortage in new cars.

The Ford Co. recalled approximately 24,000 workers; by the end of the week it expects to have around 37,000 back at work. Normally it employes around 85,000 in its parent plant at River Rouge near here.

There has been considerable activity in the parts and tool plants in preparation for new model activity, but a major boost to employment will come when General Motors announces reopening of its Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick and and De Soto as well as Packard Cadillac-La Salle divisions. Chrysler also remain closed, although Chrysler is expected to be first among the larger producers to introduce new models of its line.

In common with several other car makers Chrysler has advanced schedules for 1939 model activity. Current indications are that every producer should be in new model assembly work by October, with formal introductory dates as yet undetermined. Originally, it had been planned to formally present most of the newer types at the New York National Automobile Show early in November.

Ohio Oil Sells $21,000,000 Issues

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Through a private sale of around $21,000,000 in serial notes and sinking fund debentures, Ohio Oil Co. has arranged to retire 30 per cent of the outstanding shares of its 6 per cent preferred par $100 stock at $110 a share, it became known today.

It was reported that the company picked up another 5 per cent of the outstanding shares in the open market, at a price below the redemption value.

$100,000,000 Bills 2.85 Times Subscribed

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated August 17 and to mature November 16, 1938, which were offered on August 12, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total applied for was $285,722,000 and the total accepted $100,493,000. The average price was 99.988, equivalent to a rate of 0.047 per cent.

Sept. Bond Maturities.

The Market

Stocks Continue to Work Higher in Moderate Trading; U. S. Bonds Steady.

New York, Aug. 16.—Stocks edged forward today in trading that was a repetition of the previous day. The advance of 0.46 point in the composite average was somewhat more pronounced than on Monday and the volume, although small, was a bit higher at 614,300 shares. But the characteristics of the day furnished nothing of a surprise nature. Government bonds were steady, foreign currencies did somewhat better against the dollar and leading commodities were higher, thus giving the Department of Agriculture another brief respite while it tries to figure out the next move.

The market opened with a show of firmness and gained easily during the second hour, after which trading dwindled but advances were well held by most of the leaders. There was little enthusiasm but the absence of any news developments that could be counted upon to upset the list made it possible for representative stocks to work higher.

Stocks in the automobile division and affiliated lines were the leaders for the day, both in point of strength and activity. General Motors, up about a point, was the day's most active issue, followed by Chrysler, up 1⅞ and United States Rubber, up more than a point. Yellow Truck gained ¾ and Greyhound a half. The aviation group again was led by Bendix, which made a fractional gain along with Douglas and United Aircraft. Support for this group of stocks continues to reflect the pickup in both military and commercial purchases of planes.

Technicians are in a quandry as to the immediate future of the market, and while this scarcely comes under the heading of news, there appears now to be more than the customary difference of opinion. The bearish school holds that last week's reaction after the recovery which started two months ago, has not cut deep enough and must resemble more nearly the reactions of former years of the depression before the rise can be resumed.

Bulls Encouraged.

On the other hand, the better behavior of stocks in the heavy industries, the pump priming efforts of the Administration and the fact that the list has behaved fairly well in the face of the serious crisis in Europe and along the Russo-Japanese front has encouraged the bullish followers.

One indicator the street is watching rather closely is the level of commercial loans. If the fall upturn is to amount to anything more than the bringing into play of the Federal pump priming funds, new borrowings by business enterprises should be making their appearance, although it is true that a large percentage of the large corporations already are adequately financed and in no immediate need of additional working funds.

In general, there are no definite signs that the banks, with plentiful reserves of money, are experiencing more than a very mild improvement in demand from commercial borrowers.

Reasons for this slackness are rather obvious. On the one hand, a large section of industry still has supplies remaining from the 1937 production boom, and sees no point in adding to stocks until consumer buying is more vigorous or future prospects more definite. On the other, perhaps a majority of conservative businessmen fear that output costs, because of the likelihood or certainty of increased taxation, are due to rise still further. As consumer resistance to existing price levels is a factor in the sluggish movement of business, they must be convinced of the soundness either of using existing cash reserves or of borrowing for expansion.

A sharp advance in corn, based on scanty supplies at Chicago, helped rally the wheat market but not until after both cereals had again reached new lows for the last five years. The 3-cent jump in corn left the market up 1½ to 2⅞ cents a bushel at the close, while wheat came back 2⅛ cents, closing up 1⅝ to 2⅛. Cotton also improved, ending the session up 6 to 7 points. Reports that a cotton loan is virtually assured restricted trading.

Secondary rail lines enjoyed considerable support in a slow bond market today and many of the favorites in that group were up a point or more. Treasury issues were firm, all gaining except the 2½s of 1953-49, which were off 1-32.

On unfounded hope that directors of the Baltimore & Ohio would bring forth a debt plan at their meeting yesterday, all B. & O. issues advanced fractionally, gaining from ¼ to ½. Rock Islands and Eries were up fractionally, while Erie General 4s of '96 jumped 2 points. Up a point or more were such favorites as Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, Chicago Great Western 4s, Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s, Terre Haute refunding 5s, and the Kansas City Southern 3s.

Santa Fe issues were mixed, with the adjusted 4s off fractionally. The Pennsylvania group was higher, with the exception of the debentures 4½s of '70. The C. & O. group exhibited a mixed tone.

The best utility issues were higher for the most part, but trading was dull. Industrials showed a mixed tone, but an upward tendency predominated.

Large British Steel Group To Visit U. S.

Several Hundred Delegates Will Inspect American and Canadian Plants.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 16.—One of the largest industrial groups ever to come to the United States from Great Britain will visit iron and steel and metalworking plants in this country and conduct their autumn meetings jointly with the American Iron and Steel Institute and the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers early in October, according to the magazine Steel today.

The delegation will include several hundred members of the British Iron and Steel Institute and Institute of Metals. They are coming at the invitation of the two American organizations with whom they will meet, and they will also be guests of scores of leading manufacturing companies.

The delegation will arrive from London in two groups, one group having made a preliminary visit to Canadian industrial plants. Following the technical meetings in New York the guests will be divided into groups to follow different itineraries according to their interests, some going as far west as Chicago in their plant visitations.

Cotton Higher; December 8.30

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Cotton rallied today on a light scattering demand as offerings from the South dried up. December advanced from 8.24 to 8.34 and closed at 8.30, with final prices 6 to 7 points net higher.

The market opened 1 to 2 points higher with light foreign selling and local offerings absorbed by trade price fixing. When it developed the South was doing little hedging, early sellers rebought. Other scattering demand was influenced by advances in the stock and wheat markets. Slight partial reactions from the best at the close reflected expectations of a favorable weekly weather report tomorrow.

ICC Proposes To Wipe Out CGW Common

Drastic Revamping Suggested Cutting Capital and Fixed Charges.

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission proposed yesterday a reorganization of the Chicago Great Western Railroad Co. with drastically reduced capitalization and fixed charges. The commission's report—the second for a Class 1 carrier under section 77 of the bankruptcy act—now goes back to the District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. If approved there it will be submitted to security holders.

The commission proposes a capitalization of $62,291,627, compared with more than $139,000,000 at present. Fixed interest charges would be limited to $850,000. These charges now total $1,858,895. Common stockholders would be wiped out, the commission having found their holdings have no value.

Preferred stockholders, however, would received $11,518,375, of new common stock for $46,037,500, face value of present preferred stock outstanding. Under the proposed distribution of new securities, old bondholders would have 67.92 per cent of the voting power in the new company. Each share of new preferred and each of new common stock would be entitled to one vote in the new company.

The Chicago Great Western, in reorganization since February 28, 1935, operates 2,252 miles of trackline in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas.

The Census Bureau announced yesterday that the carryover of cotton for the cotton season of 1937-1938, which ended July 31, was 11,533,184 bales, compared with 4,498,846 bales on that date a year ago. The aggregate supply of domestic and foreign cotton for the season was 22,920,985 bales, compared with 17,901,366 for the 1936-1937 season.

The Census Bureau also reported that cotton consumed during July totaled 449,511 bales of lint and 61,805 bales of linters, compared with 442,742 and 56,706 during June this year, and 583,011 and 70,695 during July last year. Cotton consumed during the cotton year ended July 31 totaled 5,756,096 bales of lint and 712,320 bales of linters, compared with 7950,079 and 818,885 during the previous year.

Sizeable lots were being quoted mostly at 65 cents and above, scoured basis. Graded ⅝ and ¼ blood fleece wools were offered from various points of the bright wool states at 28 to 29 cents in the grease, delivered East. The higher price of this range was for Ohio wools while 28 cents was quoted on Northern Missouri fleeces. Bright Iowa fleeces in offerings including ⅝ and ¼ blood grades in mixed lots were offered from that State through Boston brokers at 27½ cents, in the grease, delivered. Legal Rituals To Be Ended in Civil Suits Here

Common Law and Equity Distinction Erased in Justices' Parley.

Drastic changes in rules and regulations of District Court civil proceedings will be in effect September 16, it was stated late yesterday after a conference between Justices James M. Proctor, Oscar R. Luhring, Daniel W. O'Donoghue and F. Dickinson Letts.

Age-old forms are to be abandoned in favor of straightforward English in which a complainant sues, is answered by the defendant, with a right extended to the complainant to answer the answer.

From there usual legal technicalities are taboo, so that an early trial on the merits of the case may be had. The rules will not be retroactive and all suits pending as of September 16 will be tried under the old forms.

Foremost among the changes is ending of the distinction between law and equity. Henceforth, simply by filing suit the litigant appeals to the court for hearing and, if he has stated a legal cause of action, is entitled to one.

Changes will not apply either to criminal or probate matters. The main distinction is that there will be no more common-law pleadings nor legalistic equity pleadings which ordinarily befuddle the layman.

Soldier's Body Found; Drowned on Canoe Ride

The body of Private Eugene F. Wiggs, 35, of Fort Belvoir, Va., missing since Saturday night, was found floating in the Potomac yesterday near Glymont, Md. The victim was identified by Wiggs' sergeant, H. K. Hasle, through a laundry mark on the trousers.

Wiggs, a member of Headquarters Company, Fifth Engineers, left last Saturday night for a canoe ride. The body was found by W. J. Chester, rowing along the river. Deputy Sheriff Bruce Shymansky declared the death due to drowning.

Norfolk Marine Museum May Receive Navy Gifts

By the Associated Press

The Navy made public yesterday a ruling that the Mariner's Museum at Newport News was qualified to receive obsolete naval articles for exhibition purposes by loan or gift of the Secretary of the Navy.

It held the museum qualified under an act giving the Secretary of the Navy authority to lend or give to certain patriotic organizations, museums and municipal corporations condemned or obsolete material not needed in the service.

Bob Burns Says—

Many's the time I've done some impulsive thing and thought I was perfectly right in doin' it, but when I'd get home and take my shoes off so's I could really think about it, I've seen that what I'd done wasn't the right thing at all. I suppose everybody's had a similar experience.

I remember one time when Grandpa Snazzy was goin' by Uncle Slug's house and saw him runnin' out of the house with a bunch of dishes flyin' at his head. Grandpa dashed inside just as Aunt Boo was pickin' up the last stack of dishes. Grandpa says, "Good gracious, Aunt Boo, you won't have a dish in the house." Aunt Boo said, "Don't you interfere. I'll teach Slug to crack the handle off my best teapot."

Judge Orders Arlington Vote On Board Term

Referendum Approved on Staggering Service of County Heads.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy in the Circuit Court of Arlington County yesterday ordered a referendum on the question of staggering the terms of office of members of the County Board. The referendum will be held in connection with the general election in November.

The last session of the General assembly provided for election of board members as follows:

"The two members receiving the highest and next highest number of votes shall be elected for a term of four years; the one receiving the third highest vote for a term of three years; the one receiving the fourth highest vote for two years and the next highest for one year."

The court action was the result of efforts on the part of Mrs. Florence E. Cannon, of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, and J. B. Lowell, of the Civic Federation, who obtained signatures of more than 250 qualified voters to a petition.

The legislation was sponsored by William D. Medley, Arlington County delegate.

The county welfare board will go to Culpeper Friday to attend the all-day regional meeting.

The morning session will be devoted to a discussion of the boards and their duties, administration, budget and financial procedure.

Among the speakers will be Dr. William H. Stanffer, State commissioner of public welfare; James W. Philips, assistant health commissioner; J. Gordon Bennett, assistant auditor of public accounts and Charles W. Crush, secretary of the League of Virginia Counties.

In the afternoon there will be group discussions of public welfare problems.

Denied by injunction the right to move a house located at North Garfield street and Wilson boulevard at Clarendon to a lot at North Highland and North Eighteenth street, Mrs. Pearle Sharpe, real estate operator, announces other arrangements have been completed.

The writ was sought by more than 20 residents of Lyon Village, who contended the plans of Mrs. Sharpe to move the house viclated covenants in their deeds limiting structures in the community to new houses costing not less than $8 000.

Plans to aid in raising funds for purchase of a trailer for use of the dioceasan mission band will be discussed by members of Edward Douglas White Council, No. 2473, Knights of Columbus, tomorrow night. The meeting will be held in the clubrooms on North Washington boulevard at Clarendon.

The meeting of the executive committee of the Arlington County Council of Parent-Teachers Association scheduled tonight has been canceled, Mrs. Ralph Turner, president, said yesterday.

Berlin, Md., Aug. 16 (AP).—Edward Armstrong, husky 25-year-old colored farmhand, was sent to the Worcester County Jail at Snow Hill tonight to await grand jury action on charges he criminally assaulted a white woman.

Constable J. William Hall arrested the colored farmhand Saturday night after a 20-year-old Whaleyville woman, wife of a young farmer and mother of an 18-month-old daughter, complained she was attacked while returning from a shopping trip.
